Lists 17 Points

By Edward T. Folliard

Secretary of State Hull, in a 17-point statement on the foreign policy of the United States, said last night that the paramount aim of that policy right now is "to defeat our enemies as quickly as possible."

Beyond the final victory, Mr. Hull said, the goal is to assure "our national security and the fostering of the economic and social well-being of our people."

To Meet 24 Republicans

Secretary Hull issued his statement at a time when critics of the State Department were saying that the Administration had no foreign policy, or was bungling it if it did have one. It comes at a time when Russia appeared to be playing a lone hand in dealing with the Badoglio government in Italy, when the State Department was again under fire for its treatment of the French National Committee of Liberation, and many persons, here and abroad, were asking if the United Nations had abandoned the principles of the Atlantic Charter.

In this connection, 24 Republican members of Congress—members who have consistently supported the Roosevelt Administration in the international field—have addressed a letter to Secretary Hull asking some pointed questions about the direction of American foreign policy.

Secretary Hull has invited the 24 to visit him at the State Department Friday morning.

Reaffirms Support

The letter was sent in the middle of last week. It was agreed that "as a matter of courtesy" nothing would be said about it by the signers until Mr. Hull had a chance to prepare an answer, but there was a leak. Among the signers, it was reported on Capitol Hill, were Representatives Clare Booth Luce and Ranulf Compton of Connecticut; Robert Hale of Maine; Christian A. Herter of Massachusetts; Walt Horan and Hal Holmes of Washington; Harris Ellsworth of Oregon, and Frank A. Barrett of Wyo-

34 Shipyard Workers Accused In Million-a-Year Wage Fraud

Baltimore, March 21 (AP).—The Federal Bureau of Investigation announced today the arrest of 34 shipyard workers accused of falsifying work records to defraud the Bethlehem Steel Co.'s Sparrows Point (Md.) yards and the Government of sums which amounted to more than a million dollars a year.

John W. Vincent, special agent in charge of the Baltimore FBI office, said that the scheme had been in operation for at least five years.

He said other arrests would follow.

The arrests of 17 of the persons were reported a few hours before the additional 17 were taken into custody. The 34, Vincent said, were counters in the welding section and were responsible for recording the amount of welding done by individual workers.

For a fee, Vincent continued, these counters would credit the welders with more work than they actually had done, thus resulting in larger pay checks for the welders.

The shipyard, working on Government contracts, built 24 major vessels last year—principally tankers and cargo ships. It is one of two Bethlehem shipyards in Baltimore.

In Washington, an FBI announcement said that the company "had cooperated to the fullest extent" in the investigation which led to the arrests.

Shipyard Manager Frank A. Hodge commented that the offenders constituted a small percentage of more than 8000 employes.

When a welder worked on a "double-time" day, Vincent continued, the counter in turn would double his charge for falsification.

The FBI agent said one of the arrested men had bought an automobile and had built a modernistic playroom and bar in his home "where he gained the local reputation of being a lavish entertainer."

When counters found a welder unwilling to pay, they frequently refused to record his completed work for several days at a time, Vincent related, with the result that the welder's pay check would be delayed.

Scientists' Deferment Considered

President Replies To Chemical Group's Appeal for Help

By Ben W. Gilbert

President Roosevelt has promised to "keep in mind" the special needs of industry for young men trained in scientific work "as we proceed to draw more and more younger men into the armed services."

In a letter to Dr. Charles L. Parsons, secretary of the American Chemical Society, President Roosevelt agreed it would "deter the conduct of the war" to take from their scientific work young men possessing special skill, training, and qualifications in chemistry, chemical engineering, physics and other scientific fields.

Dr. Parsons, at a press conference yesterday, said he was releasing the letter with the permission of the White House, and commented that "this is the first time we have received any constructive help from any high authority." Dr. Parsons had written President Roosevelt expressing concern about the accelerated induction of men with scientific training.

Demand for Men Under 26

President Roosevelt made reference to the "great demand" for men under 26 "for combat duty overseas." An expected presidential statement on policy with respect to the induction of younger men was said to be in preparation at the White House yesterday.

Meanwhile, production officials went ahead with plans for setting up machinery to protect key men under 26 in critical industry from the effect of a recent Selective Service order virtually banning all deferments to men under 26, but their efforts appeared to have struck a snag. Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of Selective Service, was said to have expressed fears that he would lose many of the younger men under the proposed plans.

Text of Letter

The text of the President's letter to Parsons, dated March 18, follows:

"I have your letter of March 14 on behalf of the American Chemical Society. As you know, there is great demand for men under 26 for combat duty overseas. In order to meet that demand it may be necessary to dip into the pool of manpower now being used for war production, Government and agriculture. In every case there will have to be a determination as to where each man can render the best service.

"I agree that where young men possess special skill, training and qualifications in chemistry, chemical engineering, physics or other scientific fields it would deter the

By D. Harold Oliver

Associated Press Staff Writer

Lieut. Comdr. Harold E. Stassen yesterday became the fourth openly receptive prospect for the Republican presidential nomination, leaving only Gov. Thomas E. Dewey and Gen. Douglas MacArthur outside that category among the possibilities most often mentioned.

Stassen wrote Secretary of the Navy Knox that he does not seek and will do nothing personally to secure the nomination, but if he were nominated he would consider it his plain duty to accept and would request inactive status to permit him to discuss the issues of the day.

The 36-year-old former Minnesota Governor thus joins Wendell L. Willkie, Gov. John W. Bricker of Ohio, and Representative Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois in the publicly receptive list of possible candidates. Unlike the other three, he is forbidden to campaign if by so doing it would interfere with his Navy duties.

Willkie Comments

Following publication of the Stassen letter, Willkie had this to say at Appleton, Wis.:

"Obviously, those who seek the preference of the voters, should discuss the issues with them or if they have rendered themselves unable to do so, then it occurs to me that they should decisively, not ambiguously, withdraw from the contest.

"All men for whom delegates are running in the Wisconsin primary can say in very simple and ambiguous language that they do or do not desire the voters of Wisconsin to vote for the delegates respectively pledged to their candidacy.

"It is difficult to know from the analysis whether Governor Stassen is a candidate or not."

Believed Receptive

Governor Dewey of New York repeatedly has said he is not a candidate, but his friends say he, like Stassen, would not decline a nomination. General MacArthur has expressed time and again a desire to return in triumph to the Philippines. His supporters, too, have said he would accept if the convention nominated him.

Stassen will face his first test before the voters in the Wisconsin

Rationing of Coal Not Yet Justified, WPB Announces

The War Production Board yesterday ruled against coupon rationing of coal during the next 12 months.

Foreseeing a tight fuel supply situation, but not stringent enough to justify direct rationing, the board agreed that Solid Fuels Administrator Harold L. Ickes should be permitted to continue controlling coal distribution through dealers.

WPB estimated soft coal production for the heating year starting next month at 600 million tons, compared to estimated requirements of 620 million tons and a stockpile above ground of 50 million tons—about a 27-day supply. The Office of Price Administration had urged adoption of coupon rationing only in the event a substantial cut in consumption was required.

The Marines overcame light enemy resistance to put Emirau under Allied control easily. Possession of Emirau, in the St. Matthias group 84 miles northwest of Kavieng, "completes the isolation of all enemy bases in the Bismarck

Russians Smash Into Bessarabia, Cut Railway, Push Near Prut River

London (Wednesday), March 22 (AP).—Russian troops sweeping across the Dniester River into Bessarabia on a 50-mile front cut the Cernauti-Baltsy trunk railway yesterday, and stormed through 40 villages to within 30 miles of the Prut River from which the Nazis launched their 1941 invasion, Moscow announced today.

Smashing German and Rumanian resistance on the approaches to the Prut, the Russians announced the capture of Drokiya, 23 miles south of Mogilev Podolski, and 25 miles west of Soroki, west bank Dniester town which fell to the Russians Sunday. Presumably the railway was cut in the Drokiya area.

By capturing Ketrosy, 5 miles southeast of Drokiya, the Russians reached a point within 20 miles of one German escape railway from southern Russia, the Slobodzeya-Baltsy line, and were within 48 miles of the major escape road, the Odessa-Tiraspol-Iasi line.

Threaten Nazi Trap

Thus the Russians, striking southward toward the Danube, were swiftly developing their threat to pocket scores of thousands of Germans in the Odessa bottleneck, 150 miles to the southeast.

In old Poland the Russians crossed into Lwow Province, cutting the Brody-Tarnopol highway at Podkamen, 10 miles south of Brody, and capturing the district center of Podkamen, 56 miles east of Lwow, big German communications hub. Sixty-two other villages were swept up in this powerful drive, said the communique.

Berlin's high command also announced that the Russians were attacking Kovel, major rail junction 100 miles north of Lwow on the road to Warsaw.

Along 50-Mile Front

The Russians fighting toward the Carpathian Mountains were spread out on a 50-mile front in Bessarabia between Mogilev Podolski and Soroki. Moscow said Ataki, just across the river from Mogilev Podolski, was among the points taken in a new crossing.

Far to the east in southern Russia, Voronovka, only 8 miles from the lower Bug River crossing at Voznesensk, was captured. The Germans falling back across the Bug were headed for Odessa and possible entrapment there because of

Fighting to the Death

Fanatical Nazi Paratroopers Battle Way Back Into Cassino

Naples, March 21 (AP).—Fanatic young Nazi parachute troops—perhaps the toughest men in the German army—have fought their way back into the ruins of the Continental Hotel at Cassino's edge, it was announced today.

Only yesterday New Zealand troops and tanks blasted their way into the extensive wreckage of the hotel on the southwestern outskirts and seized 180 prisoners, but last night the Germans struck back savagely under the exhortation of their commander, Lieut. Gen. Richard Heidrich, to throw the Allies out of Cassino.

New Zealand and Indian troops still held the railway station and Castle Hill on the slope of Mount Cassino, but the Nazis were throwing vicious counterattacks against Indian Ghurkas clinging to Castle Hill. Allied dive-bombers again supplied isolated Allied troops by parachute.

Heidrich's parachute troops, to whom have been added units of a crack armored grenadier division, average about 20 years of age and are thoroughly imbued with the Nazi doctrine. Most of them are fighting to the death.

An Allied communique held no promise of an early decision, saying that "fierce fighting continued for the fifth day for possession of Cassino and vicinity. Within the ruins of the town the enemy succeeded in bringing up reinforcements Sunday night, and mopping up has been slow."

From the battle site, Lynn Heinzerling of the Associated Press wrote at 4:15 p. m. today that the Germans had firmly established themselves on a commanding height known as Hill 165, which they recaptured yesterday, and had planted a wide minefield in the path of any Allied counterattack.

With all roads up Monastery Hill destroyed and the slopes almost too rugged for pack mules, P-36 Invaders dropped parachute bundles of food, water and ammunition to an Allied detachment isolated on a

U. S. Subs Sink 15 Jap Ships, British Get 7

Barges Now Being Sent Down at Rate of 10 Daily, Knox Reveals

By the Associated Press

American submarines, cutting ever deeper into Japanese supply lines in what Secretary Knox called "one of the most important of all Pacific operations," have sunk another 15 enemy merchant ships, the Secretary announced yesterday.

"This mode of attack," Knox said, "by and large is one of the most important of all Pacific operations, constantly wearing down Japanese lines of communication, making more and more difficult the enemy's maintenance of supply lines."

His words were underscored by announcement at Southwest Pacific Allied Headquarters of the destruction of seven more Japanese ships by British submarines in operations off the east coast and the northern tip of Sumatra. This followed by only one day word of five ships sunk by American planes which fought a four-day battle with an enemy convoy and finished the job after the ships came in sight of their goal, the beleaguered Wewak stronghold.

Ten Barges a Day Being Sunk

Further emphasis was added by Knox's own report that the barges to which the Japanese have been driven for movement of men and supplies among their island outposts are taking their own beating.

"In the last few days we have been destroying barges at the rate of 10 a day," Knox reported.

The newest bag of Japanese ships by American submersibles brought to 642 the number of Nipponese vessels of all types, including some warships, sunk, probably sunk or damaged by submarine action alone.

Two Tankers Among Vessels Sunk

Adding to that the number of ships hit by surface craft and planes, the number of Japanese craft sunk or damaged is more than 2000.

Against that total, American submarine losses since the war started are 22, including 2 lost in accidents in the Atlantic and 1 destroyed in the Pacific to prevent

New Vesuvius Eruption Hits Another Town

Lava Jets Shoot 1000 Feet in Air; 3 Villages Wrecked

On the Slopes of Mount Vesuvius, March 21 (AP).—Lava streams spilling from Mount Vesuvius—swollen and multiplied by a violent new eruption—swept on one town tonight and threatened two others at the volcano's base, after engulfing two villages during the day.

Two Italian boys were reported killed by an explosion of a stone cistern at Massa Di Somma after lava spreading above it brought the water to a boil and a geyser leaped into the air.

A violent eruption of Vesuvius at 5:30 p. m. threw jets of lava about 1000 feet skyward and hurled additional streams of the molten mass down the slopes.

In the van of the molten mass scrambled a tearful, pitiful army of bewildered villagers, loaded down with household goods.

In its wake lay thousands upon thousands of tons of fiery red coals, piling higher and higher over homes and orchards and vineyards.

The towns engulfed by the molten rock were San Sebastiano and Massa di Somma, both about a mile and a half from the top of the volcanic mountain.

Over Vesuvius, indulging in its most fearsome eruption since 1872, hung a blackish pall, and the entire Naples area was in a strange twilight caused by a cloud of gray dust. The stream of lava, 90 feet deep at points, sent up flames and sulphurous fumes.

Nazi Airmen Pour Bombs on London

London (Wednesday), March 22 (AP).—The German air force poured incendiaries and high explosives on London early this morning in a renewed attempt to burn out the capital.

The raiders were met by a terrific barrage, which subsided after a half-hour. (14 words censored.)

The Nazis used a pathfinder technique, dropping target-lighting devices and scores of flares. Six raiders were destroyed.

Clamp Controls On Bulgaria, Set Up Puppet Rule in Hungary

London (Wednesday), March 22 (INS).—After occupying Hungary and ousting its government, German troops were reported in British press dispatches today to be pouring into shaky Rumania from the west and clamping a tight grip on Bulgaria as well.

With Hungary in the hands of a Nazi army estimated to number up to 150,000 and her captive leaders apparently supplanted by a new puppet regime in Budapest, Adolf Hitler appeared moving for total German occupation of the Balkans to meet the threat of the Red army's advance.

Budapest, meanwhile, had an air raid alarm, announced by the Hungarian radio just before it went off the air for an hour and three-quarters. Resuming broadcasting, the Budapest station said later that "nuisance raiders" were over the Hungarian towns of Bes, Terce, Maros, and Drahoc.

5 Divisions Reported in Rumania

Unconfirmed but persistent reports from Ankara to London papers said five German divisions—four of tanks and one of infantry—rolled across Hungary's eastern frontier Tuesday and entered Rumania, possibly to nip in the bud a reported plot by Rumanian leaders to surrender to Russia.

South of Rumania, German authorities suddenly seized all telephone, telegraph and radio communications in Bulgaria, an Ankara dispatch related. It said the Bulgarian government, which rules a populace known to be intensely pro-Russian, had held an extraordinary meeting Tuesday to "consider a number of new measures."

The Daily Mail quoted the Turkish radio at Ankara as broadcasting a report that Rumania's government and army chiefs, headed by Premier Marshal Ion Antonescu, had held a secret conference where plans for possible abandonment of Germany and surrender to Russia were discussed.

It was suggested that the German military movements both in Rumania and Bulgaria were intended to frustrate the collapse of these countries as Germany's allies.

The News-Chronicle reported from Ankara that the Germans had begun the "full military occupation" of both Rumania and Bulgaria immediately after their swift coup in Hungary, where Regent Admiral Nicholas Horthy and Premier Nicholas von Kallay were among numerous leaders reported arrested by the Nazis.

Unified Command Expected

The Mail quoted the Ankara radio as stating that Hitler was expected shortly to place Hungary, Rumania and Bulgaria under "a unified command" in a crucial effort to consolidate Germany's immediate rear in the Balkans.

Dispatches from Stockholm quoted an observer of the German occupation of Hungary—just arrived back in his native Sweden—as stating the Nazi "invasion" of that Danube country began at 3 a. m. Sunday with a swoop by German parachutists on numerous Hungarian air fields.

This neutral source said Hungarian army garrisons put up some scattered resistance, but were quickly crushed.

Former Hungarian Premier Bela Imredy was reported forming a new puppet cabinet to be completely under Nazi control. One report said the German occupation was aided considerably by the extremely pro-Nazi Hungarian Party known as the "Arrow Cross," whose leader, Major Szalasi, was said to have sprung an internal coup in Budapest while Regent Horthy was away at Hitler's headquarters.

Rejecting Hitler's demands for the return of previously withdrawn Hungarian troops to Russia, Horthy and his chief of staff were reported to have been abducted while still at the Fuehrer's headquarters.

Yank, Believing Death Near, Pens Verse to Home Front

Representative James W. Wadsworth (R., N. Y.), interrupted the home front bickering of House debate on the rivers and harbors bill yesterday to report on an incident on the Italian front as follows:

"I am in receipt of a memorandum from an officer in Italy of general rank who has taken an active part in the military operations in that rugged country and who in his memorandum describes an incident that occurred upon the battlefield, and inclosed with it a copy of a poem written by a soldier.

"I am not at liberty to give the name of the soldier author of the poem, but I thought my colleagues in the House would bear with me just a moment while I read to them a very brief description of this incident and the poem itself.

"According to the general officer who communicated with me this man wrote this poem while lying wounded on the battlefield. He led his tank platoon in a gallant and successful attack on a certain German station and was later decorated for his action in this attack. His foot was badly mangled when his tank was knocked out by a German 88. A fellow officer amputated it while they were hiding from the Germans in a ditch. He lay there for hours. He thought he was dying when he wrote this poem. The poem is entitled: 'What Did You Do Today, My Friend,' and it reads as follows:

What did you do today, my friend,
From morn until dark?
How many times did you complain
The rationing is too tight?
When are you going to start to do
All of the things you say?
A soldier would like to know, my friend,
What did you do today?

We met the enemy today
And took the town by storm.
Happy reading it will make
For you tomorrow morn.
You'll read with satisfaction
The brief communique.
We fought, but are you fighting?
What did you do today?

My gunner died in my arms today;
I feel his warm blood yet.
Your neighbor's dying boy gave out
A scream I can't forget.
On my right a tank was hit,
A flash and then a fire;
The stench of burning flesh
Still rises from the pyre.

What did you do today, my friend?
To help us with the task?
Did you work harder and longer for less,
Or is that too much to ask?
What right have I to ask you this?
You probably will say.
Maybe now you'll understand;
You see, I died today.

Feeding Sweets to Horse Put D. C. Man in Shadow of Noose

Out of the war in the Mediterranean comes the story of James H. Tillson and the Algerian horse.

It may seem a trifle confusing at first glance, but a story in which the basic elements are a horse, six Hershey bars and a hanging that didn't come off is bound to be a little difficult in the very beginning.

It all started when James Tillson was torpedoed the second time.

Being torpedoed twice, or even three times if that be the fortune of war, is a routine procedure in the life of James Tillson and he has no yen to talk about it. But being arrested as a horse-thief in Algeria, where the penalty is hanging, all on account of having fed a hungry horse six Hershey bars—that is something in James Tillson's life that he is willing to talk about—at considerable length.

It was in Algiers and Tillson had had "a couple of brandies."

"There isn't much food to buy there so I got six Hershey bars in the Merchant Seamen's Club and went out to sit down in a park," Tillson, who lives at 4225 8th st. nw., said yesterday. "I saw this horse standing there. He looked hungry. In fact, his bones were sticking out.

"So I fed him a Hershey bar. You know, I'll bet—said Tillson, making a safe bet—"that that horse never had a Hershey bar before.

"He almost bit my fingers off.

Patton Given New Post

Gen. Patch to Head 7th Army; Praised for Guadalcanal Job

Naples, March 21 (AP).—Maj. Gen. Alexander M. Patch, 54, has been assigned to command the U. S. Seventh Army formerly commanded by Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, jr., headquarters announced tonight.

(In Washington the War Department said Patton has been given command of "another army." Army officials would not say where the general is at the present time, but it was assumed that his new assignment was in connection with preparations for the invasion of western Europe.)

General Patch formerly commanded troops at Guadalcanal and New Caledonia. He led the army troops that went into Guadalcanal to follow up the Marines' long stand there, and when the victory there finally was won, Admiral William F. Halsey, jr., commented:

"Having sent General Patch to do a tailoring job on Guadalcanal, I am surprised and pleased at the speed with which he removed the enemy's pants to accomplish it."

He returned to the United States last May to head the Fourth Army Corps at Fort Lewis, Wash.

(Patton led the Seventh Army on its invasion of Sicily, and later received wide publicity for an incident growing out of the slapping of a United States soldier in a field hospital near Palermo, for which he was publicly rebuked by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower and apologized to the officers and men of his command.)

Hull's Statement On Foreign Policy

The text of a State Department statement on U. S. foreign policy:

Secretary of State Cordell Hull on March 21 informed press and radio correspondents that after returning from his recent trip to Florida he had noted a growing interest in the foreign policy of the United States and an increasing number of requests for information about various points in our foreign policy. He said that he was glad of this increased interest. The Secretary said that in addition to many statements and declarations by the President, he had himself made a number of basic statements on foreign policy during the past two years. He thought it would be a convenience and help to the public generally if there could be compiled a brief memorandum of a number of them. Accordingly, the following had been prepared:

BASES OF THE FOREIGN POLICY OF THE UNITED STATES OUR FUNDAMENTAL NATIONAL INTERESTS

In determining our foreign policy we must first see clearly what our true national interests are.

At the present time, the paramount aim of our foreign policy is to defeat our enemies as quickly as possible.

Beyond final victory, our fundamental national interests are the assuring of our national security and the fostering of the economic and social well-being of our people.

INTERNATIONAL COOPERATION

Cooperation between nations in the spirit of good neighbors, founded on the principles of liberty, equality, justce, morality and law, is the most effective method of safeguarding and promoting the political, the economic, the social and the cultural well-being of our Nation and of all nations.

INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATION BACKED BY FORCE

Some international agency must be created which can—by force, if necessary—keep the peace among nations in the future.

A system of organized international cooperation for the maintenance of peace must be based upon the willingness of the cooperating nations to use force, if necessary, to keep the peace. There must be certainty that adequate and appropriate means are available and will be used for this purpose.

POLITICAL DIFFERENCES

Political differences which present a threat to the peace of the world should be submitted to agencies which would use the remedies of discussion, negotiation, conciliation and good offices.

INTERNATIONAL COURT OF JUSTICE

Disputes of a legal character which present a threat to the peace of the world should be adjudicated by an international court of justice whose decisions would be based upon application of principles of law.

REDUCTION OF ARMS

International cooperative action must include eventual adjustment of national armaments in such a manner that the rule of law cannot be successfully challenged that the burden of armaments may be reduced to a minimum.

MOSCOW FOUR-NATION DECLARATION

Through this declaration the Soviet Union, Great Britain, the United States, and China have laid the foundation for cooperative effort in the postwar world toward enabling all peace-loving nations, large and small, to live in peace and security, to preserve the liberties and rights of civilized existence, and to enjoy expanded opportunities and facilities for economic, social, and spiritual progress.

SPHERES OF INFLUENCE AND ALLIANCES

As the provisions of the four-nation declaration are carried into effect, there will no longer be need for spheres of influence, for alliances, for balance of power, or any other of the special arrangements through which, in the unhappy past, nations strove to safeguard their security or to promote their interests.

SURVEILLANCE OVER AGGRESSOR NATIONS

In the process of reestablishing international order, the United Nations must exercise surveillance over aggressor nations until such time as the latter demonstrate their willingness and ability to live at peace with other nations. How long such surveillance will need to continue must depend upon the rapidity with which the peoples of Germany, Japan, Italy, and their satellites give convincing proof that they have repudiated and abandoned the monstrous philosophy of superior race and conquest by force and have embraced loyally the basic principles of peaceful processes.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE BARRIERS

Excessive trade barriers of the many different kinds must be reduced, and practices which impose injuries on others and divert trade from its natural economic course must be avoided.

INTERNATIONAL FINANCE

Equally plain is the need for making national currencies once more freely exchangeable for each other at stable rates of exchange; for a system of financial relations so devised that materials can be produced and ways may be found of moving them where there are markets created by human need; for machinery through which capital may—for the development of the world's resources and for the stabilization of economic activity—move on equitable terms from financially stronger to financially weaker countries.

ATLANTIC CHARTER: RECIPROCAL OBLIGATIONS

The pledge of the Atlantic Charter is of a system which will give every nation, large or small, a greater assurance of stable peace, greater opportunity for the realization of its aspirations to freedom, and greater facilities for material advancement. But that pledge implies an obligation for each nation to demonstrate its capacity for stable and progressive government, to fulfill scrupulously its established duties to other nations, to settle its international differences and disputes by none but peaceful methods, and to make its full contribution to the maintenance of enduring peace.

SOVEREIGN EQUALITY OF NATIONS

Each sovereign nation, large or small, is in law and under law the equal of every other natoin.

The principle of sovereign equality of all peace-loving states, irrespective of size and strength, as partners in a future system of general security will be the foundation stone upon which the future international organization will be constructed.

FORM OF GOVERNMENT

Each nation should be free to decide for itself the forms and details of its governmental organization—so long as it conducts its affairs in such a way as not to menace the peace and security of other nations.

NONINTERVENTION

LIBERTY

There is no surer way for men and for nations to show themselves worthy of liberty than to fight for its preservation, in any way that is open to them, against those who would destroy it for all. Never did a plainer duty to fight against its foes devolve upon all peoples who prize liberty and all who aspire to it.

All peoples who, with "a decent respect to the opinions of mankind," have qualified themselves to assume and to discharge the responsibilities of liberty are entitled to its enjoyment.

DEPENDENT PEOPLES

There rests upon the independent nations a responsibility in relation to dependent peoples who aspire to liberty. It should be the duty of nations having political ties with such peoples to develop materially and educationally, to prepare themselves for the duties and responsibilities of self-government and to attain liberty. An excellent example of what can be achieved is afforded in the record of our relationship with the Philippines.

British Sailor Tells How Nazi Pilot Obliged Ship Crew

Atlanta, March 21 (AP).—Ken Backhouse, British seaman on leave here while his ship undergoes repairs, related an incident he witnessed on convoy duty in the North Atlantic.

"A long-range German fighter plane shadowed us for days, monotonously circling just out of gun range. After four days, we radioed the pilot, politely asking that he reverse his route, just by way of diversion.

"The Nazi promptly radioed a one-word answer, 'Okay,' and started circling in the opposite direction."

HULL

ming.

Secretary Hull's statement of last night, which was based on declarations he has made in the past two years, reaffirmed support of the Atlantic Charter.

"The pledge of the Atlantic Charter," he said, "is of a system which will give every nation, large or small, a greater assurance of stable peace, greater opportunity for the realization of its aspirations to freedom, and greater facilities for material advancement."

He went back to the Moscow Four-Nation Declaration, and said that in this the United States, Great Britain, Russia and China had laid the foundation for an international organization to maintain peace after the war. And as the provisions of this Four-Nation Declaration are carried into effect, he said, there would be no further need for spheres of influence and alliances.

Mr. Hull recalled at the outset of his statement that, on his return from a trip to Florida, he had noted a growing interest in the foreign policy of the United States, and an increasing number of requests for information about various points in the policy.

He said he was glad of this interest. He then explained that he wa issuing a memorandum based on declarations he had made on foreign policy during the past two years.

"In determining our foreign policy," he said, "we must first see clearly what our true national interests are.

"At the present time, the paramount aim of our foreign policy is to defeat our enemies as quickly as possible.

"Beyond final victory, our fundamental national interests are the assuring of our national security and the fostering of the economic and social well-being of our people."

Then came declarations on 16 topics. Under the heading of "International Organization Backed by Force," Mr. Hull included a statement he made some time in advance of the Moscow Conference.

"Some international agency must be created which can—by force, if necessary—keep the peace among nations in the future."

He recalled his advocacy of agencies which would settle political differences that threatened the peace of the world, and of an international court of justice to settle legal questions that were a threat to peace.

Reduction of arms, he said, must be carried out in such a way that the rule of law cannot be successfully challenged.

On the question of sovereignty of nations, Secretary Hull said that "Each sovereign nation, large or small, is in law and under the law the equal of every other nation."

"Each nation," he added, "should be free to decide for itself the forms and details of its governmental organization—so long as it conducts its affairs in such a way as not to menace the peace and security of other nations."

And all nations, large and small, "are entitled to freedom from outside interference in their internal affairs."

President's Cold Better, His Physician Reports

President Roosevelt, who has been suffering from a slight head cold, was "definitely improved" yesterday, according to his personal physician, Vice Admiral Ross T. McIntire.

McIntire said the President has no temperature and having remained in his private study all day, was better. He said that the President had devoted the day to work in his study and that his condition did not necessitate remaining in bed.

Japs in India, Singapore Radio States

New Delhi, March 21 (AP).—Japanese troops are advancing in fierce fighting along the northwest Burma-Assam border, the Southeast Asia Command announced today.

(The Japanese-controlled Singapore radio said Japanese units have croseed into India. It interrupted its regular transmission to announce: "Japanese units, supported by free Indian forces, crossed from Burma into India and are fighting on Indian soil.")

The Allied communique asserted that combined Allied forces operating in northeast Burma scored "unexpectedly sudden" victories in breaking through into the upper Mogaung valley, and in the capture of Sumprabum, 70 miles west of China's Yunnan border.

The Japanese had concentrated troops, vehicles and stores on the banks of the Chindwin River and were attempting to push up the Kabaw Valley just west of the Chindwind.

Another Japanese river crossing was reported on the Chindwin between Thaungdut and Homalin, 20 miles south of previously reported crossings between Homalin and Tamanthi.

Capture of Sumprabum and Pinsau Ga in the Mali Kha River valley by Gurkha and Kachin native troops put Allied columns on three sides of Myitkyina, the center of Japanese activity in northeast Burma.

Noseless 'Fort' Returns to Base Through Blizzard

At a Bomber Base in Britain (Wednesday), March 22 (AP).—Despite a blinding snowstorm, a pilot flew his noseless Flying Fortress back from Frankfurt Monday after a freak accident in which three bombs from another B-17 hit the plane.

The three bombs failed to explode, but they knocked off the nose and killed the bombardier.

Snow blown through the open nose by a 70-knot headwind covered the pilot, Lieut James C. Reynolds, of Coeymans, N. Y., and Lieut. Mark C. Liddell of St. Davis, Pa., the copilot.

Reynolds said, "We had to pry open our eyelids because they were iced up and stuck together. Our oxygen was out so we used our emergency hulbs.

Bomber Breaks Up Montana Ice Jam

25-Lb. Baby Girl Born To N. Carolina Couple

Raleigh, N. C., March 21 (AP).—A 25-pound baby girl was born to Mr. and Mrs. Amon Harris, a Negro couple, at Saint Agnes Hospital here today, Dr. Thomas F. Cathcart, the attending physician said.

The child was 32 inches long and was born with a full set of teeth, upper and lower, Dr. Cathcart said. The mother and baby were reported in "excellent condition." The parents already have 11 other children.

War Sidelights

Poles Report Nazis Slay 10,000 Daily

London, March 21 (AP).—The Polish ministry of information said today that more than 500,000 persons, mostly Jews, had been put to death at a concentration camp at Osweicim, southwest of Krakow.

In a report on Nazi atrocities, the ministry declared three crematoria had been erected inside the camp to dispose of 10,000 bodies a day.

The report asserted that men, women and children arrive by truck-loads and are removed to gas chambers, where 10 to 15 minutes are required for execution, but since the supply of poison gas is limited some persons are not dead when they are thrown into the crematoria.

Italians Aid Convoys

Salerno, Italy, March 21 (AP).—The pro-Badoglio newspaper Il Corriere said today that Italian warships have escorted 176 Allied convoys totaling 2544 ships amounting to 21,318,300 tons since the armistice last September 8.

All types of warships from cruisers to motor torpedo boats and submarines, numbering 296, carried out 231 war missions, it added.

Lieut. Fox Missing in Raid

A U. S. Fighter Base in England, March 21 (AP).—Mustang Fighter Pilot Lieut. Edward Fox, Muskogee, Okla., who set a new style in fighter collaboration by bagging a German with the help of "remote control" signals from two fellow pilots, is missing from the March 4 raid on Berlin, it was disclosed today.

On the raid on Frankfurt February 11, Fox scored his first kill while two veterans zoomed above him "talking to me like a football coach."

Home Trial for Haw Haw

London, March 21 (AP).—Without referring to "Lord Haw Haw" or others of his ilk by name, Deputy Prime Minister Clement R. Attlee told the House of Commons today that British subjects assisting the enemy by broadcasting from enemy stations "will not be included in the category of war criminals, but will be charged with offenses against British law, and brought to trial in appropriate British courts."

Mustangs Destroy 20 Planes In Wide Sweep Across France

London, March 21 (AP).—American Liberators attacked the Pas-de-Calais invasion coast of northern France today without losing a plane, and Mustangs of the Eighth Air Force made an unprecedented sweep over 450 miles of occupied France, strafing enemy airdromes and destroying 20 planes.

Ranging all the way from Paris to the Pyrenees at the Spanish border, the Mustangs shot down 11 enemy aircraft and destroyed 9 on the ground. Seven Mustangs were missing.

The Berlin radio said air activity had been observed after dusk at the Channel and "it is obvious strong formations of Allied heavy bombers have crossed the Channel" headed over the continent.

In attacking military targets in the Pas-de-Calais area, which has become one of the most bombed regions of the world in the last three months, the Liberators and their escorting Thunderbolts met no fighter opposition, although the air was rocked with antiaircraft fire.

It is conservatively estimated that 16,000 bombing and fighting sorties have been flown over the Pas-de-Calais department and its environs in the last 98 days.

The raids maintained the round-the-clock bombing pressure. American Fortresses and Liberators Monday hit targets in southwest Germany, while in the night RAF Mosquitos hit western Germany for the eleventh night in a row.

U.S. Sharply Denies Planning Vichy Deal

Destruction of Regime Pledged in Reply to De Gaulle

By John M. Hightower
Associated Press Staff Writer

The United States Government pledged unequivocally yesterday the destruction of the Vichy regime of France, and sharply questioned the loyalty of those who suggest American intentions to collaborate with Vichy officials.

Such reports, the State Department said in a hotly worded statement, are "false on their face" and "evidently inspired."

The policy toward Vichy was set forth because of reports from Algiers implying that the United States would deal with Vichy officials after the liberation of France begins.

"No loyal supporter of the Allied cause would make the ridiculous charge that the United States Government while sending its military forces and vast military supplies to the most distant battlefields to prosecute the war against the Axis powers would at the same time have any dealings or relations with the Vichy regime except for the purpose of abolishing it," the statement said.

French Committee Advised

Assurances to this effect were given to Rene Massigli, foreign minister of the French Committee of National Liberation at Algiers, in January and were communicated by him to the committee, it was learned at the State Department.

The department considered these assurances and its known general policies as having settled the question.

In recent days, however, dispatches have reported apprehension in Algiers, seat of the national committee headed by Gen. Charles de Gaulle, lest America collaborate with some Vichy individuals.

Last Saturday De Gaulle addressed the Algiers consultative assembly, which includes underground leaders from France, and made a bid for Anglo-American recognition of the committee as the proper governing power to follow invasion armies into France. He was quoted as saying that "all attempts to maintain even partially or by camouflage any part of Vichy or any artificial form of powers foreign to the government will be intolerable and condemned in advance."

U. S. Stand Called Vague

French diplomats here last night took the position that the State Department statement did not constitute an answer to General de Gaulle. These officials added that the committee would still like to know positively with whom the Allies are going to deal.

President Roosevelt told a press conference Friday that he had reached a decision on the French situation but could not make it public at the moment. Elsewhere, it was learned that the President's decision covers only American policy with respect to recognizing the authority of the French committee and that final action awaits response to this decision by the London government.

The British all along have been for much wider recognition of De Gaulle than has the United States.

The Vichy question was brought up at Secretary Hull's press conference when a newsman told the Secretary of the reports from Algiers. Hull said sharply that he did not think anybody was worried about that and that the department would issue a statement on the subject. The statement was given out at the close of the press conference.

Senators Act

Permanent Generalship Ban May End

By the Associated Press

The Senate Military Committee voted 14 to 4 yesterday to lift the lid it clamped last October on permanent rank promotions for Army generals.

While there remained doubt that any advancement would be approved for Lieuts. Gens. George S. Patton and Brenon Somervell, the committee agreed to set up six subcommittees to consider these and 12 other pending nominations.

Acting Chairman Thomas (D., Utah) said the committee tabled a proposed resolution by Senators Truman (D., Mo.), Kilgore (D., W. Va.) and Wallgren (D., Wash.) which would have banned for the duration of the war any advance in permanent ranking for officers above colonel. Only Senator Johnson (D., Colo.) supported the position of the resolution's sponsors.

Then, on Kilgore's motion, the committee agreed to consider pending and future promotions individually, rather than in block. Kilgore said he was "satisfied with the committee's action."

Earlier, Secretary of War Stimson had voiced his opposition to passage of the resolution.

President Roosevelt's nominations to elevate the 14 officers have been pending before the committee since last October 1.

Objections have been voiced to both the Patton and Somervell nominations and several committee members said they apparently had not been resolved. Patton was involved in a soldier-slapping incident in Sicily which has not been forgotten and Somervell is opposed by some members who do not want him in line to become Chief of staff, should there be any change in the status of Gen. George C. Marshall.

Navy Pay Losses Heavy in Pacific Since War Started

With the United States Pacific Fleet, March 21 (AP).—Hundreds of thousands of dollars in United States currency have been lost in the Pacific since start of the war—payroll funds carried aboard men-of-war that have been sunk.

The greatest single money loss recorded to date was more than $400,000. It went down with the USS Chicago off Guadalcanal, in the Solomons, January 31, 1943.

Lieut. (j. g.) Richard Meredith Jones, McKeesport, Pa., demanded a search by two senior officers and a sworn statement to show he did not have any of the Chicago's payroll money when he was picked up from the sea by a rescue ship.

French Retract Execution Story

Algiers, March 21 (AP).—The French commissariat of information officially announced late today that a report it had made earlier announcing the execution of four concentration camp guards was not true. The four men were convicted of murder and brutality under Vichy rule.

That announcement was issued on the basis of "an inaccurate report made to this office," the commissariat said later, and the four have not yet heard the results of their appeal for mercy to Gen. Charles de Gaulle.

Finland Rejects Peace Terms; Russia Shuns Responsibility

London, March 21 (AP).—Finland formally announced rejection of the Russian armistice terms today and a few hours later an official Soviet statement broadcast from Moscow declared that the refusal placed full responsibility for the consequences on the Finnish government.

Together the two declarations indicated a complete and final breakdown in peace negotiations.

The Moscow statement was brief, outlining tersely the order and substance of the notes exchanged by the two governments leading up to Finland's rejection of Russia's six-point proposal.

Proceedings Reviewed

"By this action, it (the regime of Premier Edwin Linkomies) has taken upon itself full responsibility for what will follow," said the statement.

The statement was signed by the information bureau of the People's Commissariat for Foreign Affairs.

It pointed ont that Finland's first answer to the offer of peace, made March 1, had been a reply that the Soviet terms were difficult to accept.

"The Soviet government informed the Finnish government it considered the Finnish reply unsatisfactory," the statement said, adding that the six points presented were the "maximum and elementary ones" and that only their acceptance could make possible an armistice.

One of the six points proposed by the Soviet was internment of all Nazi troops in Finland.

No Chance for Views

The Finnish communique disclosing the rejection, asserted Russia had not granted the Finns "an opportunity to express her own viewpoint before accepting the terms."

"Although Finland's government still aspires seriously for reestablishment of peaceful relations it, however, cannot accept in advance these terms which deply affect the existence of the whole nation without even getting any safe assurance of the interpretation and meaning of the conditions," the Helsinki communique said.

Moscow's reply to this appeared to leave open little chance for resumption of negotiations.

capture by the Japanese.

Asked about the losses of American submarines, Knox said that "it is just inevitable that practice makes the Japs more perfect in combating submarines.

"But," he continued, "our submarines also are increasing in efficiency and numbers, paralleling any increase in skill of the Japanese."

Among the 15 enemy ships sunk by American submarines were 2 tankers, a class of ship of which the Japanese are badly in need. Also sunk were 2 transports and 11 freighters which may have been loaded with men and materials.

38 Escort Carriers Lent To England

By the Associated Press

Thirty-eight deadly escort aircraft carriers — most successful enemy of the German U-boat—have been lend-leased to Great Britain to help carry on the war, Navy Secretary Knox announced yesterday.

At a news conference, Knox described the transfer as "reminiscent" of days before the United States entered the war, when 50 American destroyers were turned over to the British fleet.

Join Antisub Fleet

"The fleet of 38 carriers," Knox said, "will become a part of the antisubmarine fleet of the Allied Nations."

He added that about 50 other vessels of that type are operating with the United States fleet in the Atlantic and Pacific.

He said the 38 were not equipped with planes when delivered to the British. Without planes, food or fuel, but with ordnance and ammunition, an escort carrier represents a construction cost of about $11,250,000.

U. S. Keeps Title to Ships

Knox said that title to the ships remains in the United States, and that they may be returned after the war "if we want to exercise options."

The carriers, many of which have been built from merchant ship hulls, have an average displacement of 10,000 tons, but their comparatively small size is no indication of their fighting ability. Time after time, with their destroyer escorts, they have met and wiped out enemy submarines. They have been credited to a great extent with the virtual elimination of the submarine as a menace in the western Atlantic.

Fly Denies U. S. Force Lost Through FCC

By Mary Sparge

Chairman James L. Fly of the Federal Communications Commission yesterday challenged Representative Louis E. Miller (R., Mo.), to prove "a snide innuendo" that FCC "bungling" was responsible "for an accident that had occurred to a task force operating in Alaskan waters."

Miller voiced his charge before the Lea Committee investigating the FCC. He asserted that Rear Admiral Stanford C. Hooper, former Pearl Harbor communications officer, now retired, and Rear Admiral Joseph Redman, chief of naval communications, knew about the incident, but were silenced "by executive order."

"I hope to produce one or two boys on that task force, one of whom has been disabled as a result of the bungling of the Federal Communications Commission," Miller said.

Navy Has "No Comment"

The Navy Department answered all questions about the alleged incident with a stock "No comment."

Members of the House Subcommittee on Naval Appropriations denied having heard of any such occurrence.

Representative Richard B. Wigglesworth (R., Mass.) said after the hearing that he had no knowledge of the basis of his colleague's charges.

He said that the committee had been greatly handicapped because of the "gag" order placed on numerous Navy and Army officials, as well as on FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover, and Director of the Budget Harold D. Smith.

Fly Seeks Open Charge

Fly said after the hearing that "if Mr. Miller has any evidence that FCC men were responsible for any 'incident' as he hinted this morning, he should bring his case into the open. This charge in the form of a snide innuendo has been tossed at us at least five or six times during these hearings."

Miller opened his reference to the "task force" incident about which he has hinted before with a request for a letter "presumably from the White House" suggesting that "certain things might happen" to those who testified in secret before the committee investigating FCC.

Charles Denny, FCC counsel, asserted that the one thing he wanted to know was "the date when this task force is supposed to have gotten into difficulties because of information given by the Federal Communications Commission."

Miller referred him to Admiral Hooper.

"You don't have to beg and plead any longer. Admiral Hooper can tell you what the task force was, where it went, and what happened as the result of the bungling of the FCC."

Fly categorically denied that any evidence existed.

Devan Resignation Is Laid To Merger Plan Opposition

Dissatisfaction over a proposed merger of the General Commission on Army and Navy Chaplains and the Servicemen's Christian League into a Protestant council for the armed forces is reported to have prompted Dr. S. Arthur Devan's resignation as commission director, it was learned last night.

Dr. Devan's resignation, which was made public March 12, will be considered at a meeting of the commission's executive committee Monday in Philadelphia, Pa.

The commission's director is said to have doubted the practicality of a merger involving a "duration" body such as the Christian League, and a permanent organization, such as the commission.

The commission, clearing house of Protestant applications for service chaplaincies, has headquarters in the Woodward Building here. Dr. Devan, a clergyman of the Baptist faith, lives at 3020 43d st. nw.

4 Jap Positions Hit in Marshalls

Pearl Harbor, March 21 (AP).—The systematic reduction of the severed Japanese outer defense line in the Central Pacific rolled along Sunday with the bombing of four unidentified Japanese-held positions in the Marshall Islands.

Army medium bombers, Marine Dauntless dive-bombers and Corsairs and Navy search planes made the attacks, it was announced today. All planes returned.

House Group Kills Arlington Extension Bill

The House Military Affairs Committee yesterday killed a Senate-approved bill authorizing extension of Arlington National Cemetery.

Opposition to the extension proposal was voiced by Arlington County citizens who appeared before the committee.

Announcing the committee's action, Chairman Andrew J. May (D., Ky.) said:

"The bill has gone to the scrap heap as far as I am concerned. I'm not going to take it up any more."

The proposed legislation would have authorized the War Department to add 118 acres to the cemetery, providing space for approximtaely 45,000 additional graves. Eighty-one acres of the area are privately owned. The remainder is Federal property.

The committee's action represents a signal victory for officials and civic leaders of Arlington County. Less than a month ago the committee approved the bill, but in the face of a storm of opposition that followed from Arlington County agred to reconsider it and the reversed decision resulted.

the circling Soviet drive toward the Danube inside Bessarabia.

The Third Ukraine Army under Gen. Rodion Y. Malinovsky was hurling back the Germans toward Odessa and also had Nikolaev, Black Sea port, 65 miles northeast of Odessa, encircled on its three landward sides. Nikolaev is on the east bank of the Bug River at its mouth.

His troops were striking down both sides of the railway leading to Odessa, said the bulletin.

Fighting in deep mud, the Russians at one point, near besieged Tarnopol in southeastern Poland, were within 100 miles of Carpatho-Ukraine, formerly part of Czechoslovakia and now part of Hungary, which has been occupied by German troops. They also were about 125 miles from northern Transylvania, also part of Hungary after its Axis-sponsored removal from Rumania.

Harry Fawley

Funeral services for Harry Fawley, 51, merchant at Travilah, Montgomery County, Md., and for the past several years driver of a bus transporting children to and from Rockville public schools, will be held at 2 p. m. today at the funeral home of William B. Hilton, Barnesville, Md. The Rev. C. A. Michael, pastor of the Methodist Church at Poolesville, Md., will officiate, and burial will be in Monocacy Cemetery, Beallsville, Md. Mr. Fawley died Saturday at Montgomery County General Hospital, Sandy Spring, after an illness of several weeks.

A native of nearby Virginia, Mr. Fawley had lived in Montgomery County many years. He is survived by five children, Ruth, Laura, Anna, Charles and Harry Fawley, jr., all of Travilah. The last named is in the armed forces. He also leaves three sisters and three brothers.

conduct of the war to take them from their scientific work. This is particularly true of new scientific developments in which younger men have probably received better training than the older scientists.

"I thank you for writing and desire to assure you that the special need for such men in scientific work in industry will be kept in mind as we proceed to draw more and more younger men into the armed services."

In his letter to the President, Parsons said that the "production army" would face disaster if more young chemists were drafted.

"More than 3000 chemists now in the Army and Navy are used on assignments that require no part of their specific training and experience," Parsons wrote.

He told the President that younger chemists are vital to such new projects as radar, rocket propellents, dehydrated foods, synthetic rubber, aviation gasoline and to the production of such drugs as penicillin.

Hershey was said to have expressed concern at a War Production Board meeting that the proposal of production and manpower officials to defer 40,000 keymen under 26 would not settle the question since deferment requests from the Solid Fuels Administration, Office of Defense Transportation, and War Food Administration covering such industries as coal mining, railroad transportation, and food procession were not included.

The WPB Production Executive Committee is planning to request a limited number of critical war plants to submit a list of keymen under 26 who should be deferred.

Science and a Lasting Peace

PROPOSAL

By WALDEMAR KAEMPFFERT
(From the Magazine Tomorrow)

Despite the reluctance of the great powers to yield their ancient sovereignties in the interest of world unity the signs are plain enough that as science and technology sweep on, unification proceeds rapidly.

It means something that an Englishman, a Frenchman, an American, an Australian are scarcely distinguishable so far as their clothes are concerned. It means something that automobiles are very much alike, that electric lights in millions of homes here and abroad glow in accordance with the same principle. It means something that Hottentots, Chinese, Americans and Englishmen rock with laughter at the same film or thrill to a symphony shortwaved from New York to London. It means something that in all advanced countries people travel in similar trains, steamers or planes, cook by gas supplied by a gasometer, suck dirt out of carpets by electricity shot from a central station. It means something that mass production and standardization, which are the hallmarks of a developed industrial technology, have been adopted by every industrial nation. At the bottom of all this lies the conviction that science and technology are good in themselves and are worth cultivating for social and economic reasons.

A World-Unifying Force

Clearly, we have in science a world-unifying force that should be systematically and rationally applied. Already there are in the world perhaps 250,000 first-class research chemists, biologists, physicists and engineers. These men and women in normal times meet in international conventions and give freely of their knowledge to the world. No questions are asked about the race, nationality or creed of these internationalists. We have here the nucleus of an organization that could weld the world psychologically and socially into a unit.

Science ought to be discussed at the peace table and not just politics, spheres of influence and economic rights—the kind of science that will really usher in a new order. Science has never had more than half a chance. It has had to develop in the face of frustration, even of downright suppression. Let us then at the peace table organize research on a world-wide scale with the intention of raising all countries to a single high intellectual and economic level, of giving all peoples a common outlook, and of thus preparing them for the acceptance of a single political order. We need experience in thinking and acting together if we are to convince ourselves that more is to be gained by regarding the land, the sea and the air as a whole than by regions and countries.

Suppose, therefore, we organize a World Scientific Commission and suppose that we finance it by contributions from participating nations. One quarter of 1 percent of pre-war budgets would be enough.

The Commission would first map out what has been accomplished. Gaps in our knowledge would appear. The program of research would be framed to fill them as well as to advance existing knowledge. As the results poured in some of the major disgraces of our scientific record would be expunged.

It is a disgrace that millions must still groan with arthritis. It is a disgrace that the conquest of cancer is not yet in sight. It is a disgrace that we have only the vaguest notion of what happens when a piece of beefsteak is chewed and digested. Because we know so little of the mechanics of heredity—why we inherit blue eyes or stub noses and some afflictions from our parents—it is a disgrace that we cannot pick out of the American population the 18,000,000 who are themselves mentally sound but who are believed to be the carriers of mental disease that can be passed on. It is a disgrace that millions of chemical compounds remain to be discovered—compounds of immense potentialities in medicine, agriculture and industry. It is a disgrace that we cannot predict what the weather will be a fortnight hence in Chicago and New York.

Fruits of Organized Research

If we organize research to remove these and many other disgraces we shall not only improve the lot of mankind but change world outlook. Enlist the aid of the sociologist to predict the consequences of discovery and invention, so far as that is possible, and it lies within our power to direct social change, to imbue the world with new social purpose, to prepare the world for unity.

No vast palace of research is necessary. Universities that accept grants under the plan would still conduct research on their own account. So would the great foundations and industries. The Commission would be fully aware of its social function, meaning that the unknown would be penetrated with no thought of profit yet with the conviction that direct material and intellectual benefits would accrue. The Commission would concern itself not with inventions as such but with the discovery of principles that inventors, engineers, physicians and farmers could apply.

Year after year the work would go on. The lagging biological sciences would receive an enormous impetus, and the social scientists and psychologists would be able to make field studies and conduct experiments on a scale unprecedented. We want to accelerate the process of unification that has begun with steamships, radio, airplanes, motion pictures and engineering.

Science and Human Progress

The World Scientific Commission must concern itself with the broad pattern of education as well as with the organization and support of research. That pattern must be shot through and through with social purpose. What does relativity mean to me? Why are physicists bombarding atoms? What good will it do when they find out how matter and how the universe is put together? Such questions probe deep into meanings that are rarely revealed in the classroom. Both the social point of view and the scientific approach to any problem must be acquired by the masses of Asia, Europe and the Americas. It may take decades but the project is worth undertaking.

Give us international cooperation in science and soon there will be cooperation in other fields. For invariably change in science means social change, so that new discoveries in turn call for cooperation in government to make the most of them. With peace maintained by an international police force and experience in cooperation gained by the international organization of science (the one subject on which we can agree), the world will begin to think of unity not as something utopian but as something necessary.

AS A PUBLIC SERVICE,

we present this sound proposal for a lasting peace based on living knowledge.

Barkley to Aid Okla. Candidate

By Robert C. Albright

The Democratic National Committee yesterday pulled out all of the stops in an effort to turn that Republican by-election "trend."

To Oklahoma's Second District it dispatched Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley to help hold a teetering House seat in the Democratic column next Tuesday.

Barkley, become a party unity symbol since his break and repatriation with the President, was billed for speeches next Monday (election eve) in the cities of Muskogee and Okmulgee.

Also Importing Help

Oklahoma Republicans were bringing in outside help, too, in an effort to run up to 9 (out of 12) the GOP score of congressional by-election victories.

Apparently as an answer to Barkley, they were ready to produce Senator W. Lee (Pappy) O'Daniel of Texas, one Democrat who has never made peace with the President.

O'Daniel, already in Texas on an anti-New Deal tour, was reported ready and willing to transfer his activities to Oklahoma's Second District in support of the Republican candidate.

Republican leaders in Washington disclaimed any part in the O'Daniel arrangements, but said they had heard he would speak.

Fighting Desperately

Both the Democratic National and Congressional Campaign Committees were fighting desperately to save the seat, not only as an addition to their thin House majority but as a bulwark to party morale. GOP capture of the Colorado First District, following victories in once-Democratic Pennsylvania's Second and Kentucky's Fourth Districts, had badly dampened Democratic confidence. Here was a chance to recoup.

Out of a 10-man Second District primary race they had nominated the Oklahoman who apparently had the best chance. He was William G. Stigler, past departmental commander of the American Legion, former president pro tem of the State Senate—an Oklahoman proud of his Indian blood and who represented as attorney Oklahoma's five civilized tribes. Stigler was supporting the Administration down the line.

His Republican opponent was E. O. Clark, an attorney from the same town as Stigler, and who also boasts Indian blood, in a State where it is politically important. Clark was narrowly defeated by former Representative Jack Nichols in the last contested election, and is now telling the voters the seat was "stolen." He is conducting an orthodox Republican anti-New Deal campaign.

Shows Fright, GOP View

Senator Edward H. Moore (R., Okla.), a former Democrat turned Republican, is already in the district making speeches for Clark. Besides Barkley, Democrats will send in for Stigler, Senator Elmer Thomas and Representative A. S. (Mike) Monroney, both Oklahoma Democrats.

Barkley was invited by Oklahoma Gov. Robert S. Kerr, and yielded yesterday to the urgings of the Democratic National Committee.

Republicans hailed the news of Barkley's speeches as "confirmation that the Democrats are scared."

1700 Hear Sizoo Discuss Temptations

More than 1700 persons—a record-breaking congregation for Lenten noonday services—yesterday heard Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo plead for moral and spiritual resistance against modern temptations.

DR. SIZOO

"Let no man presume that God will come to his aid if he runs into temptation which he could avoid," Dr. Sizoo said at Epiphany Episcopal Church, 1317 G st. nw., and added:

"We may be strong enough to conquer temptation but no person is strong enough to welcome it," he declared.

Dr. Sizoo, former pastor of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, is pastor of St. Nicholas' Collegiate Church, New York City, and president of the Greater New York Federation of Churches—embracing 700,000 constituents in 1800 Protestant churches.

Dr. Sizoo will end his series of local Lenten talks today at 12 noon at Epiphany Church. Dr. Peter Marshall, present pastor of New York Avenue Church, will speak tomorrow and Friday at 12 at Epiphany Church.

Another highlight of yesterday's Lenten services was the address of Dr. John W. Rustin at St. David's Chapel, Macomb st. and Klingle rd. nw. Dr. Rustin also will address the weekly Lenten luncheon today at 12 p. m. in the Central YMCA, 1736 G st. nw.

Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, Senate chaplain and pastor of Foundry Methodist Church, will address Lenten services today at 8:15 p. m. at Reformation Lutheran Church, 212 East Capitol st.

In an exchange of pulpits, the Rev. Ralph W. Loew, associate pastor of Reformation Church, will speak today at 8 p. m. at Foundry Church, 16th and P sts. nw.

across the enemy's communication lines from the north and helped bottle up his garrisons in the Solomons and Bismarck areas.

The Marine raiders, supported by strong naval and air groups, went ashore on Emirau Island at dawn. They found no fixed enemy defenses, indicating that MacArthur had again hit where the Japanese least expected a blow.

Other Leathernecks seized Elomusao, a small island directly below Emirau.

These holdings, put the Allies closer to Truk than at any other point in the Pacific.

Emirau Island, sometimes known as Squally Island, is about 10 miles by 4 in area and is the smaller of the two principal islands in the St. Matthias group. Mussau, 15 miles northwest is the larger.

Island Has Two Harbors

The captured island is flat and has two harbors, the larger of which is Hamburg Bay on the north coast.

Allied aircraft combed the coasts of other islands in the Bismarck Sea area, striking again at Rabaul.

Australian Beauforts, Beaufighters and Warhawks hit Japanese installations at Open Bay, on the northeast New Britain coast, with 28 tons of bombs Sunday. Air patrols damaged a 6000-ton freighter-transport near Hollandia, Dutch New Guinea.

Liberator bombers struck at Aitape, on the New Guinea coast below Hollandia, and three small enemy craft were destroyed.

Tribune Backing Means Defeat Of GOP Candidate—Willkie

Annapolis, Md., March 21 (AP). Wendell L. Willkie tonight entered Maryland's Republican presidential preference primary May 1.

Appleton, Wis., March 21 (AP).—Wendell L. Willkie declared today that any Republican presidential candidate who does not repudiate the America First Committee or who is indorsed by the Chicago Tribune, cannot be elected.

In one speech, he said that "in my judgment any candidate for the Republican nomination who finds himself indorsed by the Chicago Tribune would be overwhelmingly defeated in the fall election."

At another meeting the 1940 GOP standard-bearer and candidate for the 1944 nomination said:

"Any Republican candidate who does not repudiate America First and its president, Gerald L. K. Smith, and all they represent, prior to the nomination, or who does not repudiate them after nomination, cannot posibly be elected President of the United States."

Willkie is conducting a 12-day Wisconsin campaign, seeking election of 24 delegates pledged to him who are competing against States supporting Lieut. Comdr. Harold E. Stassen, Gen. Douglas MacArthur, and Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York.

Willkie asserted that in his opinion the Wisconsin primary "is going to decide the course of the Republican Party" and said that "if my hand is not upheld then the Republican Party is going to take a route down the road to defeat." His motivation, he said, was to "make my party deserving of leadership" and that he had "fought and fought to liberalize the party so it will be entitled to take over leadership." Willkie added that he had no illusions about "the determined, dogged, well-financed opposition to me."

Bombardier From D. C. Dies In England

Lieut. John B. Dexter, 23, Army bombardier, has died in England where he was serving with the Eighth Air Force, his wife, Mrs. Helen Dexter of 1716 Kearney st. ne., learned yesterday.

DEXTER

A cable from his twin brother, Lieut. Thomas Dexter, who was stationed at the same field, informed her that funeral services were held Thursday and that a letter of explanation would follow.

Born in the District, the sons of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Dexter, the brothers enlisted in the Air Force immediately after Pearl Harbor. Lieut. John Dexter trained as a bombardier and after receiving his wings at San Angelo, Tex., went overseas last November. Thomas was trained as a pilot and followed in February.

The brothers spent their leaves together, Mrs. Dexter said. A joint letter, dated March 7, said that they had the evening off and were going to the movies.

A brother, Lieut. Charles H. Dexter, jr., is with the Quartermaster Corps, stationed at New Cumberland, Pa.

Dr. Claude C. Pierce

Funeral services for Dr. Claude Connor Pierce, sr., 65, former medical director and assistant surgeon general in the U. S. Public Health Service, will be held at 3 p. m. today in the chapel at Arlington Cemetery. Dr. Pierce died Sunday at the Marine Hospital, Stapleton, N. Y., after a heart attack.

Dr. Pierce is survived by his wife, Mrs. Tamar Shirley Pierce, and two sons, Lieut. Claude C. Pierce, jr., USA, and Comdr. George E. Pierce, USN. Another son, Comdr. John R. Pierce, commanded the submarine Argonaut which was lost in the Pacific last year.

Honorary pall-bearers will be Surgeon General Thomas Parran of the Public Health Service and other Public Health Service officers. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Mrs. Esther Beall

Funeral services for Mrs. Esther Louise Hults Beall, 28, Glenmont, Md., who died Monday at the Montgomery County General Hospital, Sandy Spring, Md., after a short illness will be held today at 2:30 p. m. at the Warner Pumphrey funeral home, Silver Spring, Md. The Rev. Franklin S. Bukannon, former Episcopal Church, Rock Creek parish, will conduct the service. Burial will be in St. John's Episcopal Cemetery, Olney, Md.

A native of Port Washington, N. Y., Mrs. Beall had lived in Glenmont a year. She is survived by her husband, A. Palmer Beall, two children, Jack, 4, and A. Palmer, jr., 5 weeks old, also three sisters and three brothers.

Offers Eye To Blinded Soldier

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

MRS. CHARLES W. VENARD, 25, University of California coed and wife of a Navy torpedoman on sea duty, yesterday admitted writing a letter to England offering one of her eyes to Sergt. Forest Vosler of Livonia, N. Y., whom she read was blinded by shrapnel on an air mission over Europe. "I didn't want anyone to know," she said. "I can get along with one eye if the other will do him any good." Vosler's doctors said, however, that there was a good chance he would recover the sight of one eye and wouldn't need to accept Mrs. Venard's offer, even if he would consider it

Attacks on Subs Win 2 Medals For District Machinist's Mate

James Henry O'Hagan, jr., aviation machinist's mate, second class, USNR, of 2914 10th st. ne., has been decorated twice for combat efficiency in two antisubmarine attacks, the Navy Department announced yesterday.

The Air Medal and a Gold Star in lieu of a second Air Medal were presented to the 20-year-old turret gunner for his action aboard a torpedo bomber. In the first engagement the plane attacked two submarines and in the second damaged a third sub before heavy antiaircraft fire forced the plane down in the Atlantic.

The pilot of the plane, Lieut. Asbury H. Sallenger of Florence, S. C., received the Navy Cross and the Silver Star Medal. The awards were made by Rear Admiral Albert C. Read, Commander Fleet Air Army, Norfolk, Va., at recent ceremonies at the Norfolk Naval Air Station.

During the first engagement when two subs were sighted, Sallenger dived to attack and severely damaged one of the ships. Observing that the other submarine was about to submerge, he made a second perilous dive at reduced speed, dropping bombs on the submerging craft, through a heavy screen of fire.

On the following day Sallenger and O'Hagan located another sub. As the plane came in to attack, the enemy scored several hits with its antiaircraft guns. Despite severe damage to his turret O'Hagan maintained his station and, with the electrical turret control system knocked out, operated the turret manually. He kept up the fire until dazed by the explosion of an enemy shell.

When the plane crashed into the sea, Sallenger and O'Hagan took to a life raft. They were picked up seven hours later.

O'Hagan, a native of Albany, N. Y., moved to Washington nine years ago. He attended St. Anthony's grade and high school and enlisted in the Navy in 1942. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. James H. O'Hagan, live at the 10th street address.

Fund Half Raised In Red Cross Drive

Washington Total Reaches $1,374,758; National Campaign Passes 50 Per Cent

Reports from the Government and general business units yesterday pushed the District Red Cross war fund just over the halfway mark in its $2,665,000 drive.

Thus the local chapter stayed well apace with other Red Cross groups across the country, as headquarters here revealed that the Nation-wide drive for 200 million dollars had reached 50 per cent with collections of $103,745,538, based on incomplete returns.

Contributions from these two divisions sent the total to $1,374,758 from 173,333 donors, making 51.59 per cent of the goal which the local chapter hopes to reach by the end of March, it was said in a report meeting in the United States Chamber of Commerce, 1615 H st. nw.

The Government group announced that it has reached 46.11 per cent of its own $1,105,800 quota with $509,863. From the general business division came reports of $470,155 from 34,231 persons.

Departments Over Top

Federal departments which already have gone over the top, Chairman Ernest Draper said, are the National Gallery of Art, the District Division of Weights and Measures, United States Soldiers' Home, the office of the commander in chief of the fleet, Tax Court of the United States, office of the Secretary of Commerce, board of directors of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and American Battle Monuments, of which Gen. John J. Pershing is head, and which has reached 500 per cent of its assignment.

Guest speakers were Undersecretary of the Navy James Forrestal and Lieut. Comdr. John D. Bulkeley, described by Forrestal as "for two years the commander of a one-man navy in the Pacific," and "a busy and efficient disturber of the peace in the southwest Pacific."

Commander Bulkeley, who skippered the PT-boat that took Gen. Douglas MacArthur from Bataan to Australia after the fall of the Philippines, told workers that the Red Cross fed and housed 150 men for six weeks in New Guinea when no other facilities were available, and that the work of the American Red Cross in Sydney, Australia, in aiding men recuperating from combat fatigue was "an absolutely indispensable service."

"It was one of the finest things I've ever seen," he said.

The Government division will meet again on Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday of next week. Tomorrow's report luncheon at the Chamber of Commerce will be for city, residential and county groups. There is no meeting today.

WLB Probes Over-Ceiling Norfolk Pay

The War Labor Board yesterday announced it had launched an investigation into widespread disregard of wage ceilings by building and construction contractors in the Norfolk-Newport News, Va., area, with the apparent approval of the Government procurement agencies concerned.

At the same time the board announced a schedule of construction wage rates for the area which had the effect of partially rolling back the illegal rates.

At the request of the board, Economic Stabilizer Fred M. Vinson directed procurement agencies to disallow—for purposes of reimbursement—any rates paid after March 2 in excess of the newly established ceilings and to cooperate fully with the board's investigation.

A three-man labor-management-public panel was appointed to conduct the investigation and to recommend whether some or all of the sanctions provided by the stabilization act should be imposed.

WLB Vice Chairman George W. Taylor in a formal opinion commented that wage increases had been granted by contractors without the approval of the War Labor Board or the Wage Adjustment Board.

Rates for common labor varied from 50 cents to a dollar an hour, although 50 cents was the legal "prevailing" rate approved by Labor Secretary Frances Perkins under the Davis-Bacon Act, Taylor said. The new common labor rate was set at 65 cents an hour.

"In this general picture of instability, however," Taylor said, two major facts were apparent, one, that the largest group of common laborers were receiving 65 cents an hour, and the second, that many contractors had improperly classified their employes and had paid wages for hours not actually worked."

Taylor commented on the role played by the procurement agencies as follows:

"In view of the widespread instability that now prevails in area (with respect to wages) and of the fact that Government agencies appear to have made reimbursement on the basis of rates actually being paid without inquiry as to their propriety under the wage stabilization program, we believe it imperative that the director of economic stabilization be informed of the action that we have taken and of the investigation we propose to make."

In addition to the 65 cents, WLB set a 70 and 75-cent rate for truck drivers, 75 cents for steamfitters' helpers, and 80 cents for mason tenders and plasterers' helpers.

Vinson, in a letter to Taylor, approved the WLB actoin, and commented:

"Unless such action is taken, with due regard, of course, to the existence of any extenuating circumstances that may justify a mitigation of the prescribed sanctions, the stabilization program is unwarrantedly endangered."

WLB Establishes Drastic Lumber Control as Shortage Imperils War Needs

Lumber is now being put under drastic controls as the critical shortage of the material threatens the United States war shipments to expanding theaters of conquest, the War Production Board announced yesterday.

All major consumers of lumber must file applications giving their requirements for the second and third quarters on or before April 25, in order that the WPB can determine demands for the coming year and distribute the supply on a priority basis.

Demand for lumber in 1944 is expected to exceed production by many billions of board feet, War Production Board officials declared. With stock piles reduced from 17 billion board feet in 1942 to 7 billion board feet at the present time, it is expected that only the most urgent war needs will be met.

This strict lumber allocation system goes into effect as former restrictions on steel and critical metals are eased, and those materials are released paradoxically to replace lumber.

The order issued today only affects consumers of lumber who used more than 50,000 board feet during the final quarter of 1943, WPB said. However, small consumers will probably be squeezed out by the diversion of lumber to war industries and overseas shipments.

Lumber officials estimated that one-half of the production in 1944 would be used for shipping war materials.

As the United States becomes more successful in the war, the demand for lumber overseas steps up proportionally When the Allies took Naples, the armed forces used 2000 carloads of lumber to put the city back into use, John M. Winton, chief of marketing control branch of WPB's Lumber Division, said.

Michael T. Slavin

Funeral services for Michael T. Slavin, 76, a former resident of Washington for seven years who died last Friday at his home in Richmond, Va., were held yesterday at the Sacred Heart Cathedral in Richmond. Burial was in Mount Calvary Cemetery in that city.

A native of Dublin, Ireland, Mr. Slavin came to this country at the age of 18. After coming to Washington, he was associated with the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad. In 1906, he was married to Miss Maud De Lacy of Richmond, who died in 1917. He was later married to Miss Elizabeth Southworth of Richmond, who survives him.

Also surviving are his sons, John Slavin, a student of Corcoran Art School who held a one-man exhibition at the National Gallery here in 1940; Pvt. Charles Slavin, United States Army, and James Slavin of Richmond.

The Gallup Poll

Dewey Is Popular Choice of Republicans In Oklahoma for Presidential Nomination

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., March 21.—In the "border" State of Oklahoma, scene of an important congressional by-election next week, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York tops the list of GOP presidential candidates in Republican rank and file preference.

At the same time, Gen. Douglas MacArthur and Wendell Willkie, whom polls have found with a substantial following among Republican voters in the South, show considerable strength in Oklahoma. General MacArthur runs second in the present survey, Wendell Willkie third.

Rank and file sentiment toward Republican candidates in Oklahoma takes on increased importance in that many Republican leaders are hoping to chisel both the Oklahoma and Kentucky border States out of the solid Southern Democratic bloc in the coming elections. Oklahoma, it will be remembered, elected a Republican Senator in 1942, while Kentucky elected a Republican Governor last November.

To determine rank and file party sentiment throughout the State, field reporters for the Institute presented to each person interviewed a list of various men who have been widely talked of as possible candidates for President. The preferences of those voters who named a Republican are as follows:

Oklahoma
Thomas E. Dewey	36%
Douglas MacArthur	27
Wendell Willkie	22
John W. Bricker	10
Eric Johnston	3
Harold Stassen	2

Whereas in the entire South, Willkie runs a close second to Dewey with a vote of 31 per cent, as against Dewey's 35 per cent, he runs 14 points behind the New York Governor in the Oklahoma survey.

Both Governor Dewey and General MacArthur are found to have about the same popular following proportionally in Oklahoma as they have throughout the entire South. In a late February report, the Institute found Dewey with 35 per cent of the vote in the South, MacArthur with 26 per cent.

Observatory reported he was unable to detect any signs that the lava flow would cease soon.

Rushing more than 200 big trucks to San Sebastiano and Massa di Somma before the lava reached them last night, the American and British armies, the RAF and the Allied military government played a major part in evacuating the people of the doomed towns.

A food dump was established at nearby Pollena, where the townspeople, all homeless, were given bread, meat, cheese and coffee. No casualties were reported.

When it "blew off" Saturday, the volcano spilled lava down its slopes in three streams. The flow of two subsided, while a third intensified as it snaked down a deep valley in a northwesterly direction.

A noon today it was flowing from the crater at an estimated speed of 40 miles an hour, then slowing in the course of its descent until by the time it fanned out on the comparatively lower slope it was only creeping.

Are Extra Lbs. of UGLY FAT Spoiling Your Looks?
Here's the Sensational New "Never Hungry" Method . . . the LAZY VITAMIN WAY TO REDUCE
How would you like to lose weight—without going hungry—without violent exercise—without taking drugs or cathartics? Well, you can.
Here is what you do. Merely take 2 teaspoons of VEE-MOR, the amazing new vitamin-mineral-protein food, in a glass of any fruit juice, tea, coffee, or any other suitable beverage twice a day as directed. VEE-MOR contains vitamins A, B, D, G and other B complex factors, as well as calcium, phosphorus and strength-building proteins—probably more of these precious nourishing elements than you would normally get in your daily food.
VEE-MOR acts, first of all, to help satisfy your bodily needs and appetite. Secondly, by balancing your diet, it helps the body utilize its own fat for energy. Try VEE-MOR today. It is so pleasant to use, reducing is no work at all. Test it for 10 days. If you are not satisfied that here at last is the simplest, easiest way to rid your body of ugly fat, bring back the unused VEE-MOR and every penny of your money will be refunded.

House Group Moves to Abolish OPA's 'Kangaroo Courts'

By the Associated Press

A House committee which has been especially critical of OPA yesterday drew up a revised price control law, which members said makes many drastic changes in policy, including the abolition of so-called "kangaroo courts."

The legislation was drafted by the group headed by Representative Smith (D., Va.), and assigned to determine whether Government agencies exceed the authority delegated by Congress.

It is in the form of amendments to the current price control law which expires June 30 and may figure considerably in the discussion of efforts to continue the rationing program for another year, at least.

Committee sources said the most important provision of the new plan would facilitate court appeals of OPA decisions and would require that the judicial review be conducted in the district where the offender is indicted.

Bowles to Be Consulted

Critics of the Office of Price Administration have hit sharply at what they call "kangaroo courts," whereby the OPA conduct hearings on violations and issues orders on the basis of the testimony.

Committee counsel now is working on the rough draft. A conference with Price Administrator Chester Bowles will be sought, perhaps next week, before the committee takes a final vote on the proposal.

Meanwhile, Col. Bryan Houston, the OPA deputy in charge of rationing, told Senators yesterday he hopes no more articles would have to be rationed.

Testifying before the Senate Banking Committee on legislation to continue price control another year, Houston gave assurance that other items will follow coffee off the ration list "whenever there is plenty to go around."

Serious Milk Situation Reported

"You can't ration plenty," Houston said. "Whenever there is more than about 85 per cent of what 15 needed of an item you'll find yourself so busy trying to stop leaks you'll just be wasting your time."

He told Senator Maybank (D., S. C.) he doubted it would be necessary to ration natural gas.

He added that the War Food Administration had reported "a milk situation that is quite serious in some 12 city areas."

Houston reported that an Office of War Information survey showed that people think the rationing of canned goods and fuel oil is working better than other systems, with gasoline rationing rated the worst. Twenty-five per cent of those questioned described gasoline rationing as "very poor."

After Senator Taft (R., Ohio) questioned the wisdom of bracketing butter with meat rations, Houston commented that if OPA had it to do over again it might separate them.

TILLSON

The poor thing looked so hungry that I fed him another Hershey."

And so it went right through Tillson's stock of six Hershey bars.

"Then I decided to get away from this horse," Tillson continued. "I started walking down the street and here came that horse right behind me. Behind the horse were a bunch of French-speaking policemen and an Arab. That Arab was awfully made about something, I could tell, but I didn't know what the score was until I wound up in jail.

"They said I stole a horse. Now why would I steal a horse?"

Stealing a horse in some parts of the world is a pretty serious offense, as in the Western United States back in frontier days. In Algiers, Tillson said, stealing a horse is "a lot worse than murder." A horse thief is just as good as as dead if he's caught. And Tillson was caught.

Next morning, the ship captain showed up to see what could be done about Tillson.

"I sat there in front of this judge while the captain did a lot of fast talking. He kept asking: 'Now, why would a radio operator on my ship steal a horse? What could he possibly do with the horse?' And nobody would pay any attention to me when I tried to talk, too.

"They finally let me out, but it cost the captain 15 francs and he wouldn't let me open my mouth for a couple of days afterward. Every time I'd start to say something, he'd come back with, 'Shut up, Tillson. You stole a horse, remember?'

"And, you know, I told my wife this story and just the other day she gave me a little horse. It's just a statute, but she said she wanted me to remember about horses.

"Do you suppose she thinks I really stole that horse?"

Halifax Fears Ford Is a False Prophet

Columbia, S. C., March 21 (AP).—Lord Halifax, British Ambassador, said today of Henry Ford's prediction in a copyrighted interview for the Atlanta Constitution that the war would be over in two months, that any "man who adopts the role of a prophet is taking a great risk with his reputation."

Halifax arrived here today with Lady Halifax for a visit to the State Capital and to Charleston.

What does a Token buy?
In the years before the first World War, $1.50 a day was called good wages . . . and a District wage earner paid 5¢ cash for a street car ride. That was one-thirtieth of his daily pay.
Today, a comparable Washington worker may earn $5 a day. The Capital Transit token he buys for 8⅓¢ represents one-sixtieth of his daily pay.
A District street car or bus fare now, with universal transfers, offers far more value than in former days.
While living costs have risen . . . including the costs of operating your transit lines . . . transportation in the District has become relatively cheaper.
In purchasing power your Capital Transit token today buys twice as much transportation as it did a few decades ago.

KIDNEYS MUST REMOVE EXCESS ACIDS

Help 15 Miles of Kidney Tubes Flush Out Poisonous Waste

If you have an excess of acids in your blood, your 15 miles of kidney tubes may be overworked. These tiny filters and tubes are working day and night to help Nature rid your system of excess acids and poisonous waste.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Kidneys may need help the same as bowels, so ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Peace, promise and impressiveness express themselves soothingly in our unsurpassed funeral service. With facilities complete, we have unburdened the bereaved of all final details for years . . . And won a name for fairness of all funeral costs.

4,900,000 Deferred, Say Reports

Approximately 4,900,000 men have received occupational deferments in industry and agriculture, it was disclosed yesterday in reports of hearings released by the House Military Affairs Subcommittee investigating draft deferments.

Of this number two million are nonfathers, and one million are below 26 years of age. In the group under 26, 910,900 are nonfathers, and 90,000 fathers.

The figures were furnished to the committee by Col. Francis V. Keesling, jr., liaison representative for Congress with Selective Service.

Father Age About 33

"One reason why there are so few fathers below 26 years of age in the occupational groups," Keesling explained, "is that the average age of fathers is about 33."

Keesling further asserted that since fathers are in the upper age brackets the Army and Navy have stated that "they are not particularly interested in them."

Costello asked Keesling if replacements for industry could not be obtained if the War Department threatened to take 4-Fs into the Army unless they were engaged in essential industry.

Keesling indicated such a program would work only to a limited extent.

The reports contained statements concerning industrial turnover showing that for every 1000 workers employed 43 quit each month, 5 leave to enter the armed forces, 6 are discharged, 51 are rehired and 9 are laid off.

Chairman John Costello (D., Calif.) declared that "it is apparent the Manpower Commission is not able to keep men employed in industry. I think probably it might be well for this committee to inquire still further into that phase of the situation to see what can be done in order to get the 4-Fs into essential industry, and the over-age men and women, to replace those who ought to be replaced, so that the men who are needed for the services will be inducted into the services. No doubt this committee will go further into that question in future hearings."

40 Are Stricken, Typhoid Vaccine Ordered Analyzed

Richmond, Va., March 21 (AP).—A laboratory analysis of typhoid vaccine used in vaccinating Navy V-12 students recently, which was believed to have been responsible for causing painful and unusual symptoms in 40 out of 64 cases, has been ordered by Lieut. J. H. Neville, commanding officer of the unit.

Lieutenant Neville said that the report, when completed, would be forwarded to the Navy's Bureau of Medicine and Surgery at Washington.

The youths experienced unusually severe and painful swellings in their arms after the second of their antityphoid shots, March 10 and 11, and many of them were hospitalized, although they have since returned to their classes, it was stated.

"We don't know whether it was the vaccine, itself, or an infection from the outside," the commanding officer said.

Funds Denied For Lunches In Schools

By the Associated Press

The House Appropriations Committee yesterday refused to recommend the inclusion of 50 million dollars for operation of the school lunch program in the $567,995,779 Agriculture Department supply bill for the fiscal year starting July 1. The fund, it said, was "not authorized by law."

Elimination of the school lunch item, which the House only recently declined to sanction, and refusal to provide funds for the Farm Security Administration and for revival of the crop insurance program highlighted the bill, which the committee cut $93,520,737 below budget estimates.

In rejecting the FSA item, the committee pointed out that legislation for reorganization of the agency's functions is pending in the House and until it is disposed of it would not be appropriate to include funds in the appropriation bill. The budget included $28,500,000 for administration of FSA and an authorization of $97,500,000 of Reconstruction Finance Corp. funds for loans, grants and rural rehabilitation.

Crop Insurance Dropped

The committee also turned down proposals for expansion and continuance of the department's emergency rubber project and for revival of the crop insurance program.

The rubber project, which centered around development of guayule as a source of supply, "will not achieve results in time to be of material advantage to the war effort," the committee said, and should be dropped until after the war.

In the extensive hearings on the bill, during which departmental officials sought to justify requests for funds for scores of Agriculture Department programs, the committee heard that United States food production could be stepped up enough to feed 380,000,000 people annually 10 years from now and that last year's food output was adequate to feed 170,000,000 people.

Penicillin Output to Increase Soon

Sufficient quantities of penicillin, the "wonder drug," soon will be available to treat 7000 patients daily, Dr. O. E. May of the Department of Agriculture disclosed during hearings reported by the committee.

Research coordinator for the Bureau of Agricultural and Industrial Chemistry, Dr. May, told the committee how development of improved strains of penicillin-producing molds had boosted production of the drug. The supply needed to handle an average of 7000 cases daily, he said, will be available when factories being erected or already in operation reach peak production.

Former State Employes To Get Pension Refunds

Richmond, Va., March 21 (AP).—Thousands of dollars paid into the State retirement system are repayable to State employes who have left the State service under provisions of an act passed by the General Assembly of 1944.

The Assembly repealed a provision that contributions were not withdrawable if the worker left the State's employ before he had worked two years.

Maj. Frank P. Evans, director of the system, said no estimate had been made of the amount of money involved and that none could be made until rather extensive records are searched.

Cold Storage Space Cleared For 1944 Food

By Christine Sadler

To make more room for the 1944 production of perishable commodities, the War Food Administration yesterday placed the following restrictions on use of cold storage warehouses for foods from last year's crops:

1. Stocks of frozen poultry, frozen and cold-pack fruits and vegetables, and fruit and vegetable purees were ordered reduced by 20 per cent within 30 days—if stored in warehouses of more than 10,000 cubic feet.

2. All products in such warehouses for 10 months or longer were ordered removed, unless specific authorization for keeping them in cold storage is obtained.

3. Cold storage facilities henceforth will be denied to nuts in the shell, canned fish and canned shellfish in hermetically sealed containers — excepting frozen crabmeat and shrimp — and to Carter's spread, which is butter treated to withstand tropical heat.

These orders follow a series (already issued by WFA) to clear cold storage space for most essential foods such as the record amount of meat now coming to market. One result to consumers in the near future may be a further reduction of point values on frozen fruits and vegetables.

Other food-front developments of the day were:

1. Praise of farmers for their production efforts by Price Administrator Chester Bowles, who promised a closer integration of OPA with farm problems. He declared farmers are wholeheartedly behind Government stabilization efforts and thoroughly alert to the damages that can be wrought by inflation.

2. A report by the War Production Board that production of home canning supplies is keeping up with demands and that tentative figures show 4,500,000,000 jars of food were home canned in 1943.

FREE BOOK ON DEAFNESS

Few people are actually "deaf." Most people called "deaf" are only hard of hearing. Whether you are now very hard of hearing or are just losing your hearing, important discoveries of the U. S. Three-Day Reunion Here Ends For Wac and Son in RAF

A three-day reunion of a Wac mother, who came to this country from England and is now in service here, and her son in the Royal Canadian Air Force who, though born here, went to serve the British, ended yesterday when Pvt. Sonia M. Jones and Sergt. Darrell Jones departed for their respective military stations in Maryland and Canada.

Private Jones, former Washington Post clerical employe, became a Wac two months ago. Her son joined the Royal Canadian Air Force four years ago, at the age of 17, and has since spent 14 months in England piloting heavy bombers.

Mrs. Jones became an American citizen upon marrying her American husband, a food exporter, whom she met in Spain. Their daughter, Mary Jane Jones, La Plata, Md., will join her mother in the Army in four months, on her twentieth birthday.

"Your further cooperation is NEEDED!"

Most people have heard about how crowded our trains are between here and Florida. They know that it is physically impossible for us to accommodate everybody who wants to go South; and that the demand for Northbound coach and Pullman space is even greater. Yet some think that they can "travel as usual."

If you should happen to be one of them, please believe us when we say that you should not travel in wartime, if you possibly can avoid it.

For there just isn't sufficient passenger equipment obtainable to care for the greatly expanded travel needs! Until the war ends, we must continue to ask for your understanding and cooperation.

TRAVEL SPARINGLY*

If you MUST travel you can help solve the wartime transportation problem if you will:

- Plan every trip and buy round-trip tickets well in advance.
- Cancel your reservations promptly, if you change your plans.
- Accept available accommodations cheerfully.
- Travel light, taking only one piece of baggage.
- Wait your turn in the dining car patiently.
- Realize that your travel desires may have to give way to the travel needs of the Services. So many coaches and Pullmans are needed for troop movements that equipment cannot be spared to meet increased seasonal demands.

*Don't travel unless absolutely necessary

Caprice

We should be the last to deny that the Lady Springtime is a delightful and exquisite creature, deserving of all the admiration heaped upon her by her friends, the poets. But all the same she probably wouldn't be able to get by the induction tests for the Wacs or the Waves—not, at any rate, if the psychiatric examiner knew his job. Like a lot of other charming people, she would be classified as emotionally unstable.

Just look at the climatic record a moment: Last week, when the sun was still in the sign of the Fishes, she was supposed to be waiting quietly out in the anteroom about seventh in turn after the Collector of Internal Revenue, who had the next appointment. Instead she burst in on us abruptly in a state of the utmost ardor and affectionate excitement. And we had, as you know, the utmost difficulty in persuading her to go back outside and read the perfume and millinery advertisements in The New Yorker, and wait her proper turn.

And then, just as the sun was to enter the Ram, and we had opened the door to usher her in, you remember the perfectly frightful scene that she perpetrated right there at the threshold? How she stormed and raged at us until we shivered? How for nearly 24 hours she sobbed and wept little frozen tears all over the place until we were up to our ankles in them, and our clothing was powdered with them? And then how she was suddenly all sparkles, as when a sudden sunlight begins to melt the glazed tree-boughs? When we inquired of her acquaintances whether this was her normal pattern of behavior, we were told that she has these tantrums almost every year, sometimes sooner, sometimes later. Her friends are constantly being scandalized by them, but forgive her all the same—because, they say, they just can't help it.

Alas, there is no doubt the lady is highly neurotic—but beautiful, ah, yes, beautiful!

Educated Democracy

We boast the highest standard of living in the world. But we are inclined to be vague as to what the standard is. No doubt we have a greater number of bathtubs, radios, telephones and automobiles per capita than the people of any other nation. But since we are a democracy and pride ourselves on our capacity for self-government, we might profitably inquire into the standards we have achieved in this regard. The logical test of a people's capacity for self-government is its level of education. Thomas Jefferson stated this truth bluntly in the adolescent days of the Republic: "If a nation expects to be ignorant and free, in a state of civilization, it expects what never was and never will be."

Among Americans 25 years of age and over, only 4.6 per cent have graduated from college. Three-fourths of them have never gone through high school. Three-fifths have never completed even a single year of high school. In the light of these figures, prepared by the National Commission for Defense of Democracy through Education, it is reasonable to ask how well the American people as a whole understands the processes of self-government. Formal schooling is not, to be sure, the only avenue to education. But it is the one instrument which we, as a society, have established to give our maturing citizens some familiarity with our history, with the character of our institutions, with the meaning of the democratic process. In grade school they are generally too young to learn these things well. Without high school education they are very likely indeed to be deficient in any true understanding of what we call the American way of life.

Among the various sections of the Union there are wide discrepancies as to schooling. In 10 Southern States, for example, fewer than one-fifth of the people 25 years old or over have completed high school. The District of Columbia in comparison stands at the very top of the list with slightly more than two-fifths of its adult population graduated from high school. Yet paradoxically, residents of the District are not considered qualified to take part in self-government, while their lives are regulated by Southern citizens of inferior educational background.

In large part the educational inequalities among the States stem from economic inequalities. This is why it seems to us essential that the Federal Government extend aid to the less wealthy States in order to enable them to bring their schools up to a higher level. All of us, since we are members of a Federal Union, have a vital stake in the preparation for citizenship available to young Americans in every part of the country. That preparation is bound, during the next two or three decades, to be put to a formidable test. Over 30 million youths now of school age will be voters 20 years hence. They will confront problems which can be solved only if they are schooled in the traditions and lessons of our past.

It is urgent that we give our children more education and better education. The defeat of the Thomas bill in the Senate some months ago was a sorry blow to this purpose. But we simply cannot afford to let the purpose be forsaken. It can be taken up again in the House if the Committee on Education will bestir itself to action on the Ramspeck bill long pending before it. Like the Thomas bill, the Ramspeck bill would make Federal funds available to the States as grants-in-aid in order to improve the pay of teachers and to expand educational opportunities. It would in no sense impair local autonomy over the schools. It would simply lend a helping hand to less fortunate members of our union. Whatever we hope for in the postwar world must depend for its realization on how we meet this issue of education today.

Russian Tide

All the Balkans are now trembling to the sound of the hammer blows which they hear on the other side of the Carpathians. On the thundering Russians come. They started at the Volga, 900 miles away, and, with the new penetration into Bessarabia, are giving the Nazis and their Balkan helpers no rest as they sweep irresistibly toward the Danubian delta. Berlin itself has taken fright. In a hurried switch in defensive tactics the Fuehrer has ordered the occupation of all Hungary. Hungary is one of his satellite states, but, unlike Rumania, has hitherto been free of the German soldiery. The country, in other words, has remained ostensibly sovereign. But Hitler's need of Hungary to shore up a new defense line along the Carpathians is too great to permit of any punctilio. So he has ridden roughshod over Hungary's remaining independence.

How the Hungarians are taking the latest example of Nazi highhandedness is a question the answer to which is hidden in the general Balkan confusion. Regent Horthy is said to be a Nazi prisoner. A new set of collaborationists is reported to have been put in the saddle. But the Hungarians are doubtless showing some resistance, useless as it is; for Hungary still has a certain pride in its ragged independence. That country, moreover, has long been restive under its tutelage to Nazi Germany. Three months ago the possibility of a rising against the Horthy regime was sufficiently advanced to warrant some surreptitious encouragement from the Anglo-Americans. That nothing came of the scheming is probably due to Stalin's intervention. The Russian leader is said to have warned his partners against a repetition of the Italian experience. Here a political deterioration ran ahead of miltary preparations to take advantage of it. Why, therefore, precipitate or even encourage a coup in Budapest till we were in a better military position to come to Hungary's aid?

The Kremlin's argument seems to have been decisive. For the political plans to engineer Hungary's defection appear to have been dropped abruptly. Incidentally, they were probably in General Marshall's mind when he launched his attack on labor leaders in this country for making his military task more difficult by encouraging labor unrest. He feared, doubtless, that the labor strife in America might upset the apple cart in Hungary.

Why the Anglo-American allies did not precede these political maneuvers by a landing on the Dalmatian coast is a problem that must be left to postwar revelations to elucidate. Certainly such a landing would seem to have been the logical move after the conquest of Sicily and the Italian heel. In that event, now that Russia is well astride the Dniester, the entire Balkans would have been caught in a gigantic pincers movement. By this time there might have been no more satellites. By this time there might have been no more Rumanian oil flowing to the Nazi war machine, no more of a dozen or more essential materials that Germany gets from the Balkans. However, the strategy has been otherwise. The Balkans have been left to Stalin to conquer, and he has begun the job with such high promise that the Balkans have now become the focal point of this great war.

Next in the path of the Russian bear is the Rumanian satellite. He, like the Hungarian, has long been anxious to liquidate the Nazi connection. But Rumania, unlike Hungary, is tied hand and foot to the Nazis, since the Germans are on Rumanian soil. Their number is being augmented daily with General von Mannstein's fleeing forces. Helter-skelter they are retiring on Rumania proper, forced back by the mighty anger of the Red army. The momentum of this great offensive, which never seems to stop for breath, is awe-inspiring. It may make the Second Front simpler than is now feared in London.

Sales Tax

The Gallup poll concludes on the basis of a just completed survey that "the dominant pull of public opinion today is toward a sales tax." That is, 55 per cent of the poll voters would prefer having a sales tax imposed on everything they buy to an increase in income tax. Only 34 per cent of the voters favored an increase in income taxes as an alternative to a sales tax, while 11 per cent were undecided. Less than a year ago, in May, 1943, a similar poll showed only 42 per cent of voters in favor of a general sales tax as compared with 47 per cent preferring an increase in income taxes.

This popular trend toward a general sales tax is not in the least surprising. For millions of Americans in the lower-income groups have for the first time during the past year made personal acquaintance with the income tax. So long as the great majority of the people escaped this form of direct taxation or paid only a negligible income tax, they were understandably opposed to sales taxes that would compel them to make contributions to the Treasury regardless of the size of their incomes. Now that the income tax has been democratized and people are made acutely aware of its existence by pay-as-you-go deductions from wage and salary checks, the public is disposed to look more indulgently upon sales taxes as a lesser evil. While this change of public attitude does not meet the theoretical objections to sales taxes—their lack of adjustment to ability to pay—it does indicate that the politicians who shy away from sales tax legislation for fear of losing votes are exaggerating the danger.

The Gallup poll also indicates that nearly half the population would be willing to pay higher taxes to enable the Government to meet a larger part of our war expenditures, 48 per cent of those polled voting in the affirmative, 42 per cent in the negative, and 10 per cent undecided. This survey, taken in conjunction with the sales tax preference poll, strikingly refutes the assumption that the feasible limit to tax increases has been reached. That assumption is further undermined by the huge volume of income that is being currently saved after payment of taxes. We could raise taxes much higher by a comprehensive sales levy without going beyond the limits of what is politically expedient.

War Casualties

The latest official account of American war casualties, issued just about a fortnight ago, shows that we have already lost in killed, wounded, missing and prisoners 162,282 men. Among these 37,853 are dead. It is, of course, a heavy toll—not to be minimized in any way by comparisons. It seems worth noting, however, that, although we have been engaged in a conflict of greater scope and for a longer period than the whole of our participation in World War I, the cost in human life has thus far been kept considerably lower. Our casualties in all categories during that earlier venture into world warfare amounted to 364,800.

Evidently American forces have not yet entered combat on a scale in any way commensurate with the size of the citizen army we have been building. A heavier price in men has been paid so far on the road to victory by our Allies. A few Americans have been so careless of the facts, or so chauvinistic, as to declare that our own troops are bearing the brunt of the fighting. The record scarcely bears them out. No recent figures respecting British Empire casualties are available. But it is known that for the first three years of the war—that is, up to September, 1942—more than half a million of the Empire's soldiers and sailors were killed, wounded or missing. The United Kingdom alone contributed 275,844 of these casualties, more than half the total.

These statistics do not take into account, moreover, the serious losses sustained by men from various parts of the British Commonwealth in the Tunisian, Sicilian and Italian campaigns in 1943 and 1944. In all of these, Empire participation was considerably greater than our own. It is salutary to bear in mind, besides, that civilian casualties in England itself up to September, 1942, amounted to 102,934 men, women and children. And even these, of course, represent but a tiny fraction of the tremendous and terrible losses suffered by the Russian people, military and civilian alike. No figures are available as to Soviet casualties, but they are figured in millions, no doubt.

It may be that victory can be purchased without great additional loss of life. But we gravely doubt it. We have set ourselves to a great and inescapable task and cannot now blench at the cost of it. No one knows what toll will be exacted in the supreme and final effort. But it is heartening to know that we fight shoulder to shoulder with stanch Allies who have not shirked or stinted in the devotion of their human resources to the common cause. We ourselves can do no less.

Another Biscuit

As Senator O'Daniel observed the other day, "Of course, a lot of people are being mentioned for Vice President." This seems rather conclusively demonstrated by his own earlier assertion that "I've even been approached myself with a question as to whether I would run for Vice President with Roosevelt." We were aware, to be sure, that the Vice Presidency is a difficult office to fill. But we had no notion, we confess, that the Democrats had been forced to quite such extremes.

Mr. O'Daniel was altogether right, we think, when he "turned 'em down." His radio personality, so formidable in Texas, might not harmonize entirely with the more ceremonious procedures of a national campaign. Nor do we think that his temperament would find complete satisfaction in presiding over the Senate—or vice versa. Has anyone, we wonder, approached him with a question as to whether he would run for the Presidency—without Roosevelt, of course? It's a free country isn't it? Anyone is entitled to approach anyone with a question.

LOSS

If one eye should lose sight the other eye
Would serve the need; if we had but one ear
We still could drink of sound, we still could hear
The eager lark ascending to the sky.
We are so intricately made . . . we fear,
But not too much, to lose one part—nor die
At such a loss. In truth, the spirit's cry
Is anguished, but the soul will persevere.

But you are individual, unpaired,
And nothing could indemnify your flight;
I have of most things two, of you but one.
The wound you left would never be repaired;
No other's candle could replace your light—
No stars repay the loss of my lone sun.

JOHN E. DONOVAN

Cost Of Living

By Mark Sullivan

Inflation Threat

FROM SEVERAL ANGLES, cost of living will shortly clamor for greater space in the news. Labor leaders claim cost of living has gone so high as to call for an increase in wage rates. This, if granted, would result in still higher cost of living, then still higher wage-rates—and so on into the dreaded spiral that might end in runaway inflation. To the demand of the labor leaders, Government, through the War Labor Board, says wage rates must not be raised above present standards.

In figures, the battle is between 43.5 per cent, which the labor leaders say is the increase in cost of living since January 1, 1941—and 23.4 per cent, which official Government statistics say is the increase. The labor leaders attack the Government figure as "humbug," say it has "insulted millions of American housewives" as well as "organized labor." To this the Government statisticians make a reply which relies on factual figures rather than on hard words. The judgment of independent experts, acting as umpires, is that the Government figures are carefully and scientifically compiled.

IT IS AN intricate field, in which only experts can speak with authority, and then only after painstaking work. A judgment confined to the mere impression of an observer would say decidedly that the Government figures seem more carefully arrived at than the labor leaders' figures. The same impression would say that the battle against runaway prices and inflation is carried on courageously by the Government agencies which bear the burden. Definitely, it takes courage for the War Labor Board to stand firm in support of the ceiling on wage rates which they set nearly two years ago, the "Little Steel" standard, against the clamorous demands of labor leaders that it be raised.

In the battle against rising cost of living and threatened inflation, the general headquarters and the high command—the generals and colonels and captains—are in Washington. But the infantry who battle the enemy face to face are the housewives of the country. The courage and resourcefulness with which they keep their families' cost of living down, and the pride they take in their not infrequent successes, are illustrated by letters this column has received. There is a fine American spirit in the letter from a Rochester, N. Y., housewife who compares her experience in 1939 and this year:

"In 1939 we served an abundance of fresh fruit in season (even to strawberries in January). In 1943, we took advantage of an unusually luscious and plentiful rhubarb crop in our back yard that had to substitute for or piece out scarce and exorbitantly priced fresh fruits and berries."

TRUE, NOT ALL have a rhubarb patch in their back yards, nor even a back yard at all. Dwellers in apartment houses have no such resource. The battle against cost of living is not on equal terms for all. The statistical average for the whole country may differ considerably, upward or downward, from the experience of any individual family. But even those without access to gardens can manage something by watching variations in price, by careful buying, and by substitutions such as that practiced by the lady who writes that she has changed from steaks and chops to hamburgers, eggs, and cheese. Such substitutions can be practiced without loss of nutritive value—and this is a thing many housewives are learning, to the country's advantage by the experience all are now having. Theey are learning, too, the value and satisfaction of unaccustomed foods, such as soy beans, soy butter, peanut butter. America is receiving an education in nutrition.

To be envied, and also to be admired, is the lady who writes: "I am a mother of four children, and am considered economical by my family and friends. I canned last year 109 quarts of corn, 100 tomatoes, 96 beans, 25 beets, 25 carrots, 60 jellies, 63 juices, 15 peppers, 19 broccoli, 24 spinach."

Not all war's resourcefulness and adaptability, nor all its sense of triumph, is on the battle front.

Slum Clearance

The current controversy over public housing is an excellent example of what Mr. Wallace terms the conflict between human rights and property rights.

On the one hand, the real estate men know that public housing will cause a general lowering of rents and property values. They also know that they will be deprived of construction profits and rent return. In short, theirs is purely a dollar consideration.

On the other hand, those of us who favor public housing know that private capital will never seriously tackle the slum problem. What real estate man, for instance, will invest capital in clearing a slum property and erecting modern housing in a slum district when he can just as cheaply invest in a better section of the city and gain a much better return?

And we also know that from the standpoint of all human values slum clearance is a must; for the slums breed crime, ill health, race hatred, in fact every condition that is contrary to the ideals of the better world we are supposed to be fighting for. SERVICEMAN.

Washington, March 19.

Eire's Neutrality

By Sumner Welles

Axis Diplomats Serve As Spies

THE RECENT exchange between our Government and the government of Eire, and the subsequent decision of the British government to suspend normal communications between the United Kingdom and southern Ireland, raise the question whether in the present world traditional neutrality is any longer even conceivable.

There are today no neutral powers in the Western Hemisphere. There is none in the Far East. There is none in Africa. In the Near East there is only Turkey. And in Europe there remain but Sweden, Switzerland, Spain, Portugal and Eire. Only these few small states are still out of the war which Germany and Japan have inflicted upon the rest of mankind.

Of the European neutrals Sweden and Switzerland, because of their geographical position, have been in great danger. They could not for long have defended themselves against a Nazi attack, nor could the United Nations render them much effective help. Their continued freedom depended upon their ability to walk a tight-rope. The overwhelming majorities of both peoples are wholeheartedly democratic. Their sympathies have steadfastly been with the cause of the United Nations. They have been subject to every form of threat from Hitler. They have nevertheless been able to block almost every attempt on the part of the Nazis to utilize them for their own ends.

PORTUGAL remains neutral only in name. It has finally remembered the terms of its ancient alliance with England.

Had it not been for the passionate opposition of the masses of the Spanish people themselves, Franco might well, in the first years of the war, have prostituted the interests of Spain to the Nazi regime which he so warmly admires. Today the mounting tide of the victories of the United Nations has permanently removed this danger. The recent adoption by the United States and Great Britain of a realistic policy in their dealings with Franco has also resulted in a great curtailment of the assistance which the Nazis can obtain from Spain.

Of the neutral states of Europe, Eire has been in a favored minority of one. For it has been able both to have its cake and eat it.

The Irish people have suffered neither the hourly fear of Nazi attack nor the constant coercion of Berlin to which the other European neutrals have been subjected for four and a half dire years. The strong right arm of the British armed services, whether the Irish appreciate it or not, has saved them from these threats to their liberties.

Throughout these years the policy pursued by Downing Street in its relations with Eire has been wholly free from undue pressure, however much the stubborn refusal of the Irish government to help Great Britain or the United States in their war effort has handicapped the naval, air and military forces of the United Nations in their attempts to safeguard the British Isles, and to prosecute the war.

THE ATTITUDE displayed by President Roosevelt could have been neither more friendly nor more patient. He has time and again done his utmost to put the facts in their true light in his messages to Prime Minister de Valera. But to all of his messages the answers have been wholly unresponsive.

The use of naval or air bases in southern Ireland by the United States or Great Britain would have saved many of our convoyed vessels from being sunk by German U-boats.

That may be regarded as a negative factor. What, however, can only be considered as a very positive factor, and one which gravely endangers the vital military interests of the United States and of Great Britain, is the persistent refusal of the Irish government to liquidate the Axis missions still functioning in Eire. The entire world has learned by repeated experience that Axis diplomatic and consular establishments are nothing more than centers of espionage and subversive activities.

Early in 1942 President Roosevelt impressed upon the Irish government the danger which these nests of Axis agents represented through the reports on naval or troop movements which they were able to send by clandestine radio or other means.

Eamon de Valera has never been noted for possessing an elastic mind. His reply dwelt solely upon the small number of Axis officials stationed in Eire, and the belief of the Irish authorities that the precautionary measures they were taking would make it impossible for Irish neutrality to be infringed.

Axis officials in Eire can carry on no legitimate business. There is no trade between their countries and Eire. There are no political negotiations in progress. The German minister and the Japanese consul in Dublin, with their staffs, are solely occupied in spying upon our military preparations and in attempting to procure support for their own subversive plots from those who hate Great Britain.

AT THE MOMENT when we are about to launch the greatest military undertaking of the war the lives of our men and the success of our operations are endangered by these activities.

Yet Prime Minister de Valera, and, in fairness it should be added, a great majority of the Irish people, because of their determination to stick to a rigid interpretation of a wholly unrealistic theory of neutrality, refuse to remove these grave dangers to the United Nations, to whose power Irish peace is due, and upon whose victory the future liberty and independence of Eire depend.

The measures to isolate Eire which have been taken, and which may still further be taken, are fully justified, hardly as these measures will bear upon the national economy of the people of Eire.

The utter lack of logic of our Irish friends was never more graphically demonstrated than by the recent editorial in a Dublin newspaper which said, "We are so fond of peace in Ireland we will fight like hell to keep it." The Irish are not going to be doing any fighting. It will be the men of the United Nations, whom they will not even lift a finger to help, who will be doing the fighting and the dying to make it possible for the Irish to enjoy the peace of which they are "so fond."

Adherence to the strict letter of neutrality is no longer an honest course for any freedom-loving, peace-loving people. Those who will not lend a hand in the supreme effort to make it possible for a real peace once more to exist have no right to expect to be heard by the victors when the war is won.

Citizens' Rights

I am not in the habit of trying my court cases in the newspapers, but when I find in The Sunday Post of March 19 glaringly false statements made by a reporter presumably quoting the allegations of a pleading, I deem it proper to call your attention to the false statements. Your reporter says: "Although the neighborhood—where U and 1st sts. and Rhode Island ave. nw. converge—is occupied predominantly by Negro families, the complainants allege that use of the building in question by colored persons would be 'absolutely ruinous' to their property, would make the neighborhood 'undesirable' and be 'subversive to their peace of mind.'"

First false statement: "U and 1st sts. and Rhode Island ave. nw. converge." They do not converge.

The second false statement: "The neighborhood is occupied predominantly by Negro families." The complaint, which your reporter ostensibly was quoting, states that the house in question is one of approximately 400 houses, owned and/or occupied exclusively by people of the white or Caucasian race under a deed covenant prohibiting the ownership, use or occupancy in any manner by Negroes or persons of the Negro race or blood; further, that with other covenanted and white-occupied property a territory of approximately 1000 homes, churches and schools is covered.

Let me add the following statement: The many movements now under way to encourage economic opportunities and independence for our Negro citizens are most commendable, and right-minded citizens of all colors must approve. When such movements, however, are used by politically minded leaders and newspaper reporting and editorials to break down the rights of our people to live their lives among people of their own color—whether white or Negro—the time has come for a strong protest against such reporting and editorializing.

It is the desire of the fine white people in our community to live their lives among people of the white race—in their homes, their schools and their churches. I know of no reason—religious, civic or as friends of the colored people—that denies them this right. Do you? HENRY GILLIGAN.

Washington, March 20.

Good Deeds

This is a busy, war-torn and war-weary world. Expediency seems to be the keynote. Yet when I recently read in the public press of how a gentleman, a Mr. Al. Stern, rescued a pigeon with broken wing, and, commandeering a taxi, took the ailing bird to a competent veterinarian, I felt that, although we live in a world of strife, rivalry, business competition, etc., the human heart is still capable of responding generously when called upon.

The individual who put aside his business affairs, which might have been of the greatest importance, to minister to one of "God's lesser creatures," is truly a gentleman, and, as such, worthy of trust and confidence. This seemingly insignificant action on his part might well be taken and applied as an index to character. His kindness of heart will not be lost. His conscience will assure him that he has ably played his part—a real person—one of Nature's noblemen.

Would that we had more of this type of American manhood—and womanhood. One need not be ashamed, nor fear censure or ridicule, for extending a helping hand to what the good St. Anthony termed, "Our little brothers." We would, on the other hand, be recreant in our absolute duty not to say divine privilege, should we fail them in their hour of need.

Warriors' Homeland

By Malvina Lindsay

To Absent Men

WE UNDERSTAND that you worry a great deal over things at home and fear all will not be the same when you return. We should like to reassure you that every person and every blade of grass will be just as it was when you left six months, a year, two years ago. But we realize you are too intelligent not to know life is not like that, America, and each of us, must either change or stagnate, and you don't want the latter to happen.

But to allay your fears, we can promise you this:

First, we will each do our best to be here when you get back—for we know that is the worry uppermost in your minds. We will not spend ourselves foolishly or recklessly, or be martyrs to our own grief, loneliness, hopelessness or personal sense of importance in this war. We will cherish our health—yes, and our appearance—and our normal zest in living, so that you will find us fit, capable and cheerful. And of course we will keep on loving you!

Home will be held together for you—if not physically, at least in our hearts. It it's the same home, the furniture will not be moved too much, certainly not your favorite chair. But we will have an electronic dust eliminator and a dishwashing machine, if any are available, and any other drudgery-saving devices that will give us more time and better nerves for companionship with you and for more active citizenship in our community.

Chance for Kids

The neighborhood will be much the same, though probably spruced up with much paint and repair and a few new prefabricated houses. We are planning to have fewer kids playing baseball in the streets, or running you down on tricycles and bicycles. We hope to have more places where the big on-coming crop of youngsters can play safely and learn how to be useful cooperative citizens.

We also hope to provide more community recreation for you, and to have available more night classes and places where you can pursue your interests and your self-development.

There will be plenty of food on the table, though perhaps not exactly what you had in the past. We may be sharing some of our foods with peoples much hungrier than ourselves, and we know that will be all right with you. Then we may have some of the new dehydrated foods scientists are developing. You will find us better cooks because we have learned to do more with a little. Your menus will be better chosen because we have learned much about health and nutrition.

You may find many changes in material things such as radios and motor cars. Those, of course, you will delight in. We also hope you will find many changes in immaterial things and will welcome them as well.

Now don't become alarmed, for we are not thinking of changing the Constitution, or the form of government, as some jittery alarmists have been trying to make you believe. We intend to keep safe for you your freedom of speech and of conscience, your voice in government, your personal liberty. We will keep alive America's neighborliness and friendliness, its buoyancy, self-confidence and daring. We will preserve its cleanliness and comfort, its technical efficiency, its brightness, its gayety, all the things that make you homesick for it. But we would not be true to the trust left us, if we did not also try to keep it living changing, progressing. For that is America.

Change for the Better

We hope for instance you'll find when you return fewer beggars, bread lines, or job seeking pavement pounders. We're going to make the effort of our lives to whip this unemployment problem. We're determined that in the new-fashioned America everyone who can and wants to work shall have that privilege — and with fair recompense and hours.

We're trying to make it so there will be more security in your lives than formerly, less of the stalking fear or sickness, old age, dependency. We're also trying to see to it that, if you want to go in business for yourself, you'll have more opportunity. We don't want you to come back to the "good old days" of unrestricted monopoly with the little fellow squeezed out by the tycoons and the private cartels.

We're trying to change a lot of things—to simplify income taxes, streamline the activities of Congress, get rid of the slums and the tenements, improve the physical and mental health of all Americans, get a more adaptable system of education, bring about more harmony between races, sects, classes so that this country won't be a breeding ground of fanatical conflict as it was after the last war. Most of all, we're trying to find a way whereby the United States can do something effective to halt a repetition of this tragic war you're fighting.

We may not get all of these things accomplished. But we are trying hard enough that we feel we can promise you, in some degree—not an unchanged, but a better America.

North Burma Drive

Ernest Lindley

Results Of Allied Exploits

THE POLITICAL and diplomatic effects of recent Allied exploits in northern Burma may have been even more favorable than the military. Among the benefits observed or anticipated by watchful officials are these:

LINDLEY

1. A boost to the morale of the Chinese as a result of the sterling work of the Chinese troops who, in collaboration with Brigadier-General Merrill's American raiding force, sprang the trap on the Japanese in the Hukawng Valley. The Japanese thus outmaneuvered and outfought were of a crack division which captured Singapore. Morale-wise this victory was deemed so important by some officials that they regretted that American troops had taken part in it. On the other hand, the presence of Merrill's raiders—a token of more to come—and the evidence of excellent cooperation between American and Chinese ground forces were, or should have been, in themselves encouraging to the Chinese.

2. Proof that, properly equipped and led, the Chinese are first-class fighters, a contention from which Lieutenant General Stilwell has never swerved. These were troops which had been equipped and trained in India under Stilwell's direction—some of them survivors of the trek out of Burma in early 1942, others flown down from China a few at a time in the transport planes which carried supplies from Assam to Kunming. It is hoped in American quarters that the demonstration will be taken to heart by officials and officers — chiefly British—who have deprecated the usefulness of Chinese troops. The employment of the Chinese army to the best advantage is obstructed by political difficulties inside China and in the government at Chungking. But the intrinsic quality of the Chinese soldier has been shown again—not only his hardihood and courage but his ability, when properly led, to handle modern weapons and to execute a rather intricate and exacting military plan.

3. The evidence of good American-British-Indian collaboration in planning and carrying out the spectacular airborne invasion "southeast of Myitkyina." The elaborate engineering and air tactics and equipment involved were developed by the American Army. But the plan for this particular operation was worked out in final detail in the Southeast Asia command, and the troops thus miraculously deposited below the Japanese forces in northern Burma were British-Indian.

4. The stimulation to the morale of British-Indian troops, as a result of this daring venture—assuming that the promise of its initial success is not lost—and of the earlier success of Indian troops in the south. The reverses suffered by British-Indian troops in Wavell's campaign last year understandably had not been helpful to their morale.

5. The repair of Lord Mountbatten's prestige and the healing, or glossing over of widely advertised differences between him and Gen. Stilwell. There have been, and still are, disagreements over the conduct of military operations based on India. Intense American dissatisfaction was responsible for the various personnel shifts culminating in the choice of Mountbatten as Allied commander in Southeast Asia. Although his appointment did not produce the prompt and complete remedy for which American officials and high officers had hoped, they regretted for two reasons that he became the target of criticism: (1) they believed that he was doing as much as he could personally to correct the difficulties, and (2) he had been accepted as Allied commander in this theater. The attribution of criticism of him to his American subordinates in the command was considered especially unfortunate, in view of the exemplary conduct of the British staff officers under General Eisenhower.

Finally, it should be noted that these North Burma exploits probably do not presage major Allied military operations in the Burma theater this season. The monsoons will arrive in a few weeks and remain until October.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Politics On A High Level

MADISON, WIS.—Long after the present primary campaign is over, the speech that Wendell Willkie made here will be remembered. It may well become one of the vital documents in our political history. In a moment of bitterness and dissension, of cynicism and indifference, Willkie has with simple clarity defined the dilemma of the Republican Party. And more than that, he has defined the political crisis of our time.

CHILDS

If this sounds solemn, I mean it to sound solemn. No matter what his past mistakes, his blunders, his inconsistencies, regardless of all political mud-slinging, I believe history will record that he stood up and spoke the plain truth as no one else had spoken it.

As Willkie said, there are striking parallels with that era of 90 years ago when a little group of determined men met in Ripon to express their profound convictions through the medium of a new political party One party, the Whig Party, was dying in bankruptcy; another, the Republican, was about to be born.

WHAT MAY BE at stake here in this delegate election is more than the future of Wendell Willkie, the individual. It may be a decisive turning point for the GOP. If Willkie is defeated, there will be strenuous efforts to make it seem that this is a repudiation of the things he stands for—true international cooperation, the necessary minimum of Government regulation to make a free enterprise system free. The successful Republican nominee—and it will not be Willkie if he loses the April 4 primary in Wisconsin—would be under constant pressure to pull back from any vital commitments.

The theme of Willkie's Ripon talk was that a political party, to survive, must stand up and speak out on the big questions of the day. Dodging, hedging, evasion will end in bankruptcy.

"A political party," said Willkie, "can never stand still . . . Those leaders of a party who insist on applying old formulas to present problems merely because those formulas worked in the past are damaging the party and will eventually destroy it. For they are standing still, whereas the world around them moves."

IN THIS, OF COURSE, was practical politics. It was aimed at Governor Dewey for his silence, his failure to declare himself on the presidential race. The contest here is essentially between Dewey and Willkie, with possibility that some scattering delegates may go to General MacArthur and Governor Stassen, both of whom are on duty in the Pacific. But it was politics on a high level.

Of two rebellions within the Republican Party, Willkie spoke with implied approval. One was that of the "liberal Republicans" who rose in protest against the corruption of the Grant Administration in 1872. The other was the Bull Moose revolt of Teddy Roosevelt.

Willkie may have been hinting that it was time to start another rebellion within the GOP. There have been intimations that he would start a third party. It is known that he investigated thoroughly the machinery for getting a third party ticket on the ballot.

But this year there isn't a chance. State laws have been deliberately drafted to make any third-party attempt all but impossible. Even the Socialists, who are veterans at the third-party game, will have difficulty this fall getting on the ballots of States with enough electoral votes to add up to a majority.

That is why it is all the more important for the two parties to give vigorous expression to the issues that touch the lives of every one of us. Otherwise we end in a blind alley of cynicism and frustration, and the marker pointing in that direction says fascism.

I don't know whether Willkie will bolt his party if the nominee is a cautious trimmer cut to get the votes of every possible group by saying as little as possible. I don't think he knows. At this point it isn't important.

It is important that he has spoken with simple forthrightness of the problem of our day. Read that Ripon speech. Our grandchildren may be reading it in history books 50 years from now.

'What Are We Doing For the Alcoholic?'

The Council of Social Agencies and the Committee on Religious Life in the Nation's Capital will sponsor an all-day conference to discuss "What Are We Doing for the Alcoholic?" at 9:30 a. m. today at the Chamber of Commerce Building, 1615 H st. nw.

Speakers include Dr. Selden D. Bacon, assistant professor of sociology at Yale; Martin Gross, department of applied physiology at Yale; Dr. E. M. Seward Hiltner of the Commission on Religion and Health of the Federated Council of Churches of Christ in America.

Pope Believed Improved

London, March 21 (AP).—The Exchange Telegraph Agency quoted the German-controlled Paris radio today as reporting from Vatican City that Pope Pius had received 12 cardinals and the Archbishop of Genoa yesterday. This was taken to indicate that the Pope's health had improved considerably.

Clayton Urges Sale of Surplus Goods

By the Associated Press

W. L. Clayton, recently appointed Government surplus property administrator, asserted yesterday surplus property held by war agencies should be disposed of immediately.

"The more we can dispose of now, the less will be our problem in the postwar period," Clayton told a special House committee on postwar problems.

He disclosed he has asked the War and Navy Departments to "dig vigorously" and "bring to the surface" all possible surpluses which can be sold to civilians now.

Government surpluses, Clayton assured the committee, will be sold through regular trade channels with the buyer protected against exorbitant prices. Regional offices will give businessmen throughout the Nation a chance to buy surpluses which may be centralized in one or two places.

FOR battle front and home front, American manufacturers in one year have converted 1,405,000,000 yards of cotton fabric into vitally needed bags.

From tiny silica gel bags to millions of rugged barracks bags, the cotton bag industry is delivering, on time, the goods of war.

To war-worker and to soldier, cotton bags are transporting unprecedented amounts of food. To farmer and cattle man they are bringing unprecedented amounts of feed, fertilizer, and supplies.

Cotton bags today are on every firing line. They are solidly back of every production line.

Capital Store Sales Off 14% In February

By S. Oliver Goodman

Dollar volume of Washington department store sales fell 14 per cent in February, the sharpest drop for any city in the Fifth Federal Reserve District. For the first two months this year local store sales were 9 per cent under the same 1943 period, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported yesterday.

The February slump was attributed by the bank to the unusually heavy buying in the same period last year.

"It should be remembered . . . that sales in February, 1943, were greatly stimulated by scare buying which followed the shoe rationing order issued on February 7, 1943," the bank said, adding, "Sales of clothing and piece goods were very large during all February and a part of March last year."

The following table shows individual percentage comparisons of department-store sales in leading cities of the Fifth Federal Reserve District:

Business Briefs Of D. C. Interest

Loan Delegates Named

The executive council, District of Columbia Building and Loan League, yesterday named Chapin B. Bauman and R. W. Santelmann as delegates to the annual parley of the Southeastern group which convenes Tuesday in Richmond.

Carl H. Ellingson, executive vice president of Firs' Federal Savings & Loan, will address the gathering on public relations while Clarence E. Kefauver, executive vice president of Columbia Federal, will discuss postwar planning.

Southern Pacific to Cut Debt

The Southern Pacific Co. yesterday reported it reduced its outstanding debt by $49,361,147 during 1943 and set aside funds for payment on January 1 of $29,009,000 of 3¾ per cent secured bonds.

A. C. Mercier, president, in a report to stockholders said that in addition to the parent company, solely controlled affiliated companies had reduced their funded debt and equipment obligations in the hands of the public by $3,780,716.

For the second successive year volume of both freight and passenger traffic increased, but operating expenses also advanced with a result that net income in 1943 of $67,100,000 was $18,300,000 less than in 1942, Mercier said.

Latest Earnings Statements

Sears, Roebuck & Co. reported a net profit of $33,866,087, equal to $5.80 a share on 5,837,968 shares of capital stock outstanding, for the fiscal year ended January 31, 1944. For the year ended January 31, 1943, net profit was $33,946,989 or $5.87 a share on 5,780,744 shares outstanding.

United Gas Improvement Co. and subsidiaries report net income for the year ended December 31 of $10,735,324, equal to 38 cents a common share, compared with $15,838,818, or 52 cents in 1942. The company reported that 1943 share earnings are after six months' dividend requirements on preferred stock which was called for retirement in June.

Canadian National Railways reported gross revenues for 1943 of $440,615,955 (Canadian funds), an increase of $64,961,412 over 1942. After payment of operating expenses, the net operating revenue was $116,140,286, an increase of $29,484,418 over the previous year.

Shell Union Oil Corp. and subsidiaries reported for 1943 net income of $24,542,536, equal to $1.82 a common share, which compared with $16,860,007, or $1.29 a share, in 1942.

Consolidated Edison Co. of New York reports for 1943 net income of $30,357,683, equal to $1.70 a common share, against $31,489,524, or $1.79 a share, in 1942.

American Viscose Corp. reports net profit for 1943 of $6,352,223, equal after preferred dividends to $2.98 a common share, compared with $6,746,032, or $3.20 in 1942.

Draft Drain Seen Forcing Transit Cuts

Further staggering of business and Government hours will be necessary if more employes of Washington transportation industries are taken into the armed forces, E. D. Merrill, president of the Capital Transit Co., yesterday warned the Washington Board of Trade's public utility and transportation committee.

Additional curtailment of bus service also is planned if emergency conditions require it, Merrill told the board members at a luncheon meeting.

Manpower is one of the major problems of the Capital Transit Co., Merrill said.

"A further spread of beginning times (for business and Government) right now would enable us to render more comfortable service—and may be necessary if many more men are withdrawn to go into the armed services," the president of Capital Transit and of the American Transit Association emphasized to the committee.

"It is estimated that we now carry about 60 per cent of the people entering the business area as compared with something like 47 per cent prior to the war," he added.

Forecasting the possibility of additional bus service curtailment due to tightening up on heavy duty tires and gasoline, Merrill stated: "We are approaching another critical period and have been asked to revise our plans for further cuts in bus service to be prepared for any emergency which may arise."

Emphasizing the wartime load that mass transportation was handling, Merrill pointed out that railway travel between Washington and New York, considered very large, averages between 20,000 and 30,000 people on week days, "which is equivalent to the number of passengers the 14th street car line and the Mount Pleasant line combined bring into the downtown area in the three hours of the morning peak."

Motor Trouble and Fire Halt 'Flying Ace' Flight

New York, March 21 (INS).—Motor trouble and a small fire in an engine today forced a Flying Ace, transatlantic flying boat operated by the American Export Air Lines, to turn back from a scheduled flight to Europe. There were no injuries among the 10 passengers and damage to the plane was of a minor nature.

Capt. C. A. Thompson, the pilot, reported that trouble developed in one of the engines and a resultant small fire was quickly extinguished.

Ringside Table

With Mary Harris

DON'T WORRY TOO MUCH about that new 30 per cent tax on night spot checks after April 1. It's not so sweeping as you might think. A bistro may have music, but if there's no singing, dancing or floorshow, the tax is not operative. This lets out oodles of popular places—the Neptune Room, Mayfair, Restaurant 823, Hi-Hat and others. It's rumored, too, that in deference to their patrons' wallets, several managements are considering eliminating singers and dancing so as to come within the nontaxable group. . . . Places which operate in several rooms have a special advantage. Thus at the Old New Orleans Manager Gerry Garry' announces that he will encourage customers to dine on the main floor where there is no tax on the checks, then finish the evening with dancing in either the Latin Quarter or Sazerac Rooms and pay a tax only on the drinks. At the Troika you may have an untaxed dinner in the Crystal Room, with smorgasbord and an instrumental trio but no dancing, then move into the Troika proper for the revue and dancing. When you go to the Trade Winds, you may dine at Ruby Foo's on the first floor, then go upstairs for the floorshow and dancing.

One of the swankest and newest of downtown spots may change ownership today. If the boys put their names nicely on the dotted line, a notable Washington bandleader will take over the bistro.

A DAZZLING REDHEAD AND BRUNETTE are now adding beauty, fun and songage to the Latin Quarter. Helen O'Hara of the flaming topknot does impressions ranging from Uncle Tom to Fibber McGee, winds up with hilarious portrayals of alcoholized femmes. Dark-eyed Vivien Hobert, Washington girl with a velvety contralto, is pinch singing for Mariam Carle, who's vacationing in Florida.

NITERY VETERANS. Don Armando, host at the Copocabana, was an officer in the Rainbow Division in World War I . . . Ralph Smith, who greets you at Olmsted's was with the American troops who squelched Revolutionist Sandino some years ago.

CAROL JAMES, chic little singer with Carr's band at Treasure Island

Peter Borras, owner of the Madrillon, and that charming person, Gladys Murphy of NBC, will be married early this summer, according to our little bird department.

TYPEWRITTEN SHRIEKS come from Frank Romer, expert tub thumper for the Neptune Room. Says he: "Have you seen fat Billy Gilbert—the man who sneezes in the movies?" (Sure. He's our pet comedian.) "How could you confuse his name with that of our Billy Arnold? I shudder with the premonition that you're going to say next that Benedict Arnold is at the Neptune Room." (Oh, no! Mr. Romer. Not that!)

The new Arcadia Ballroom is proving just what the young folks ordered. The alternation of Jack Corry's orchestra with De Vaughn Clement's rumba band is a spicy combination and the youngsters enjoy the good-looking lounge and snack room, too.

WASHINGTON LIKES. "The Hilo Hop," as lilted by Edna Kichi with Ray Kinney's band at Del Rio. . . . The "Waves Victory Song," written by Ensign Muriel Schnell and played by Al Yurdin's Four at Mayfair. . . . "Noches Rondo," as sung with drumming guitar accompaniment by Gloria Estevez at the Windsor Room. . . . The glorious Red cavalry songs in the Don Cossack Revue at the Balalaika. . . . Those too infrequent trumpet solos of Johnny Mitchell at the Lotus, especially when he sounds off on "Sugar Blues." . . . Roy Kyser's swoonful intoning of "I Couldn't Sleep a Wink Last Night" at the Rainbow Room. . . . "Speak Low," as played with elegant ardor by Eddie Fogel's band in the Dnbonnet Room. . . . Ida Clark's soft organing of "My Buddy" at Burt's Trans-Lux. . . . Those rollicking college songs that the Freres Heintze always play around midnight at Restaurant 823. . . . The sleek musical comedy tunes featured by Eddie O'Hearn's band in the Carlton's Congo Room. . . . The spicy touch that Bert Bernath's orchestra in the Pall Mall Room gives to "Besame Mucho." . . . That trieky harmonizing of Eddie Brown's band in Cafe Caprice when they abandon themselves to "Love, Love, Love."

Winners at the "Stardust Nights" at Restaurant 400 have the dithers and jitters. For Massa Joe Moss is going to have a grand contest between the weekly winners to select a new entertainer for his Club 400 in Manhattan.

Sgt. Dutch Harrison Wins Charlotte Open

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

This fellow Roger Wolff brings the three-fingered knuckle-ball to the Nats' pitching staff. That almost completes the cycle. Manager Ossie Bluege already had as his command a one-fingered knuckle-baller in Johnny Niggeling, while Dutch Leonard is the exponent of the two-fingered knuckle-balling job.

POVICH

Any way you throw them, they're all knuckle balls. The various grips are each to the individual's taste. Niggeling claims he can get better control by throwing his knuckler off merely the middle finger. "He must be a magician," say Leonard, "I need to did two fingers into the ball."

Wolff marvels at both Niggeling and Leonard. "I don't see how they do it," he says. "I learned to pitch the knuckler with three fingers and it would slip out of my hands with anything less." Niggeling and Leonard, in turn, regard Wolff as something of a curiosity. "How can a guy pitch a knuckler with three fingers on the ball?" they chorus.

As for Manager Bluege, he takes no part in the argument, but feels himself blessed in triplicate. "All knuckle ballers are freaks," he says. "When I was playing, I used to hate 'em. The only time I like 'em is when they're on my side."

Wolff used to be the butcher's boy out in Chester, Ill. At least his dad owned and operated the village butcher shop and young Roger used to deliver the choice cuts to the customers' kitchen doors. He was the Wolff at their doors, as it were. But the effects he could get with his own knuckles wrapped around a baseball intrigued him more than his Pop's pig knuckles, and he signed a contract with the St. Louis Cardinals' chain.

To the credit of the Cardinal scouts, they didn't discourage young Wolff's predilection for his knuckle ball. Old baseball men are usually quick to rule out freak pitches by young rookies and counsel them to stick to a fast ball and curve, but for Roger they made an exception and encouraged him in his knuckler.

The story is that Wolff didn't take his work too seriously in the ten years he spent with Cardinal minor league clubs. They kept him around in the hope that he would knuckle down to work and blossom as a big winner. He had the stuff, but not the self-discipline. Anyway, there was a fuss with a hotel elevetar operator somewhere along the line and the Cardinals turned him loose, finally. That's where Connie Mack stepped into his life.

Mack brought Wolff up from Williamsport at the end of the 1941 season. His first start for the A's was in Washington, at night. Wolff didn't win, but Mack was rather pleased nevertheless. The A's lost that one to Dutch Leonard, 1 to 0, despite a four-hitter by Wolff. The rookie's performance sent the press box inmates scurrying for some background on the four-hit pitcher.

The Nats' 64 night games this season fit in perfectly with the plans of Wolff who is found of night-life in the big leagues. "The knuckler has the edge under the lights," he says. "Leonard and Niggeling and myself ought to do all right. I don't want to make any boasts, but I reckon the three of us ought to win 50 games for the club this season."

The trouble with knuckle-ball pitching, says Wolff, is that the weak hitter is more apt to get a hit than the good hitter. "I used to take care of fellows like Ted Williams and Chet Laabs and Rudy York, who were hefty swingers, but the seventh and eighth men in the batting orders, the slap-hitters, caused me the most trouble."

Among Wolff's assets is a nice 4-F card from the Army doctors. He has been rejected twice, now, for a faint heart murmur. There was no warning to take it easy, however. For the past two years Wolff has been one of the workhorses of the league, starting and finishing games for the A's and pitching more than 200 innings per year, the hallmark of a heavy duty man.

Wolff won the game last year that the Athletics will forever remember. It was the second game of a double-header with the White Sox and Wolff was bound to be famous whether he won or lost. It he didn't win, he would be known as the pitcher who was on the mound when the A's set a new record of losing 21 games in a row. He won, and halted the sad streak at 20. He beat the White Sox, 8 to 1, that day. In his next start, Johnny Niggeling and the Nats shut him out, 1-0.

Hawks, Leafs Win Stanley Cup Games

Detroit, March 21 (AP).—The Chicago Blackhawks cracked a four-year Detroit jinx here tonight, beating the Red Wings 2 to 1 in the first game of their Stanley Cup hockey series before a crowd of 10,897.

Two quick goals in 44 seconds near the middle of the third period turned the trick for the Hawks, who won their last game on Detroit ice March 15, 1940, and had since lost 17 and tied 2.

The winning marker was scored by Doug Bentley, who had 77 points in the regular season to finish second in the individual race. Bentley took a pass from Clint Smith near center ice and skated all the way in to beat the Red Wings' goaltender, Connie Dion, at 7:56 of the period.

Montreal, March 21 (AP).—The third place Toronto Maple Leafs tonight upset the first place Montreal Canadiens, 3 to 1, in the first game of their best four-of-seven-game semifinal Stanley Cup hockey playoff series. It was the first defeat the Canadiens have suffered on home ice this season.

Illini Dash Star To Have Busy Weekend

Champaign, Ill., March 21 (AP).—Claude (Buddy) Young, Illinois freshman track star, is going to have another busy weekend on the dash runways.

The 17-year-old speedster who won the Olympic sprint series in the Chicago Relays Saturday, will run in the Cleveland Knights of Columbus meet on Friday night. Then he will move on to Lafayette, Ind., overnight to sprint in the annual Purdue Relays Saturday.

Notre Dame Club To Hold Rockne Breakfast Sunday

The Notre Dame Alumni Club of Washington will hold its annual Communion breakfast in honor of the late Knute Rockne, famed Notre Dame Coach, at Holy Cross College, 4001 Harewood rd. ne., at 9 a. m., Sunday, March 26.

Tribute has been paid to the former great mentor since the first year following his death in 1931 annually by the club, and servicemen in this area who are former graduates of Notre Dame are expected to attend the mass of which the Rev. Robert Sweeney will be the celebrant.

For further information concerning the mass, contact either Thomas McKivitt at SL. 2650 or Sam Richards at WO. 2350.

Double Deer Take Is Urged By Robertson

Chairman Robertson (D., Va.) of the Committee on Wildlife Conservation told the House yesterday that in order to maintain the deer population of national forests at present levels, the hunter take should be doubled.

Reporting on committee work during the past year, Robertson reviewed data submitted by the various Government agencies directly involved in conservation work, including the Fish and Wildlife Service, the National Park Service, the Forest Service, and the Soil Conservation Service, the Associated Press reported.

Describing an "astonishing recovery" in the game populations of the national forests, Robertson said in 1942 there were 3.6 times as many big game animals as in 1921, or over six big game animals per square mile of the gross area. Of these, deer were far the most numerous, followed numerically by elk, black bear, antelope, mountain goat, bighorn, moose, peccary, grizzly and Alaska brown bear, and wild boar.

The monetary value of the annual crop of wildlife from national forest lands only, he said, was $56,630,000.

Hunters generally, Robertson said, contributed approximately 225 million pounds of meat to the Nation's food supply last year, in addition to the indirect contribution growing out of predatory control.

He reiterated the committee's appeal that the War Production Board and other agencies involved make available to hunters this year as large a supply of ammunition as could be done consistent with the war effort.

Rates Army First

John Lawther, Penn State cage coach, rates Army's unbeaten quintet as the best his team opposed this year.

Gorsica Turns Down $5000 Tiger Offer

Beckley, W. Va., March 21 (AP).—Johnny Gorsica, Detroit pitcher, said tonight that his services were available to the Tigers again this year for the sum of $7500, but not for the $5000 contract offered by the club.

Gorsica has had contract difficulties with the Tigers in the past, notably in 1942 when he carried his case up to Baseball Czar Landis—and lost.

Declaring he would reject the club's latest contract, Gorsica said he "postively" would not play under such terms and indicated that he would be happier if Detroit traded him to some other club.

The big right-handed hurler has spent the winter working in his wife's drug store and gift shop, but said he had kept in shape. Gorsica is the father of a son and is 3-A in the draft.

Army Holds Reds Interest

Bloomington, Ind., March 21 (AP). Military developments held the center of the stage today as Cincinnati's Reds, kept inside by the weather, worked out under glass.

Two discharged servicemen showed up: Mike Kosman of Detroit, a former Marine and former infielder with the Lafayette (Ind.) Red Sox and Kermit Wahl, 21-year-old third baseman recently released from the Army.

On the debit side of the ledger stood these items:

Cards Work Outside

Cairo, Ill., March 21 (AP).—The National League champion Cardinals went through a three-hour session this afternoon in their first outdoor practice of the spring training season.

Manager Billy Southworth followed with a fielding drill, using Ray Sanders at first, Emil Verban at second, Ora Burnett at shortstop and Whitey Kurowske at third.

Tigers Drill Outside

Evansville, Ind., March 21 (AP).—A break in the wintry weather gave the Detroit Tigers their first full-scale workout in four days today and at the conclusion of the drill Manager Steve O'Neill announced that there would be an intrasquad game tomorrow.

J's Kept Indors

Wilmington, Del., March 21 (AP). Manager Fred Fitzsimmons had his Blue Jays flying—up the stairs at the State Armory—when cold weather kept his squad indoors again today.

Fitz claims that running up and down stairs is one of the very best conditioners—but he didn't participate himself. He said Ron Northey and Jim Wasdell looked a bit "heavy" and let them lead the way.

Mack High on Kell

Frederick, Md., March 21 (AP).—Georgie Kell, assigned the third base spot with the Philadelphia Athletics, led all leagues in hitting when he batted .396 for Lancaster of the Interstate loop last season, but here's Connie Mack's opinion of Kell:

"He sure can field.

"I certainly like him around that bag," the A's manager said, "he'll dive and slide for those hard hit balls. Now, if he can only hit anywhere near as well as he did last year, he'll make a terrific difference in our club."

Don Gutteridge Signs

Cape Girardeau, Md., March 21 (AP).—Don Gutteridge, the Pittsburg, Kans., school teacher, arrived in the Browns' training camp today and the squad rose to 13 players.

Army Rejects Bobo Newsom

Fort Jackson, S. C., March 21 (AP). The post public relations office said today that Louis Norman (Bobo) Newsom, pitcher for the Philadelphia Athletics, had been rejected for Army service.

Newsom, recently traded to the A's by Washington, reported for his examination from his local board at Hartsville, his home.

MEL OTT

Lakewood, N. J., March 21 (AP).—Abbott and Costello unwittingly wrote the scrip for this spring training season years ago. "Who" still is on first base, "What" is on second and "I don't know" on third. They might have added "Which" is manager.

The big question in this New York Giants camp behind the Pine Forest is who will succeed Mel Ott if he goes? There have been as many answers as questions, ranging all the way from Dolf Luque and Clarence Jonnard as co-pilots to Billy Jurges, Gabby Hartnett, Carl Hubbell and Gus Mancuso.

Co-managers seem as good a guess as any, because President Horace Stoneham has stipulated that the job belongs to Master Melvin after it's all over, over there. Ott will name his own successor if the draft board put the okay on him next week.

There is no assurance that Mel will pass the physical as he can't read the scoreboard from the Polo Ground bench and has some charleyhorses that give his legs a marked resemblance to knotty pine.

Some Bull:

Sam Sobel Sneaks Into Town With Big Fighter, Tall Story

By Walter Haight

Perhaps a Florida truck driver made a remark at a local filling station or a traveling salesman talked loudly in a hotel lobby or maybe a little bird told him, but from somewhere Sam Sobel, fight manager, got word that a fistic superman was at large and crying for action in the backwoods of North Carolina.

Sobel let me in on the fact that he was going to go down and see this guy and object in letting me in on this meager information about his trip was "I don't want anybody to think I'm going to North Carolina nosing around about Aaron Perry." Maybe it was the fact that Perry was born in Carolina was an accessory before the fact.

A few days later Sobel reappeared. He wiggled his cigar to a 45-degree angle, leaned toward me and began to mumble out of the otherside of his mouth. I knew he must have sold himself something in North Carolina for he actually mumbled with a Southern accent.

Haight Ducks Sobel

I had to duck Sam's short jabs as he told me about a fighter named Bull Wilson.

Here's the story as he told it: He located his man behind the barn giving a sound beating to a 300-pound bag of sand hanging from a tree. Sam introduced himself. Asked the youngster if he wanted to be a fighter. After discussing a fistic career with the giant, Sam asked, "Can you hit?"

The boy swung into the sandbag. "Oh, I know you can hit the bag," said Sam. "but can you hit a moving object?"

The youngster jumped the nearby fence, walked up to a bull that came toward him and threw a right between the animal's eyes.

"You should have seen it," mumbled Sam. "That bull went down on his back, practically knocked out!"

He Knocks the Bull Around

Sam's eyes were blazing when he got to that point of the story. I said, "Yes, and I guess you're going to tell me that bull teeth flew all over the field."

Last night Sobel brought Bull Wilson to our sports department. I looked him straight in the eyes and asked, "Boy, did you ever knock down a bull?"

"Yes sir," he replied without smiling. He doubled up his right fist, pointing to a cut on his big knuckle. "That's the only time I ever hurt my hand in my life. It must have grazed one of the bull's horns."

But leaving the bull angle out of it, Young Wilson looks and acts the part of an excellent heavyweight prospect. He's more colorful than a South Seas sunset . . . He's 6 feet 1½ inches tall . . . weighs 205 . . . never had a trainer . . . learned to fight with book "How to Be a Boxer in Nine Lessons" . . . won five straight knockouts in Charlotte Golden Gloves but lost decision in finals . . . played eleven games without having a substitute for his high school football team . . . beat all comers in a makeshift ring in Burke County . . . saw his first professional boxing show last Monday night at Uline's and on the way out said to Sobel, "I wish that Armstrong was a heavyweight, I can whip fellows like him."

That's Bull Wilson, friends. He goes to the post Tuesday night on the Turner's Arena card if Matchmaker Gabe Menendez can dig him up an opponent.

I wonder if it wasn't a Bull Durham sign he hit.

Bobby Brown Added To Turner's Card

With Nick Latsios facing the New York Italian star, Rocky Graziano, next Tuesday night in the Turner Arena windup, Matchmaker Gabe Menedez has signed Bobby Brown for the semiwindup role in a scheduled 6-rounder, he announced last night.

A search is on today for an opponent for "Bust 'Em" Bobby, and Menendez is contacting two prominent New York welters with an offer for the bout.

McSpaden Finishes One Stroke Back

Charlotte, N. C., March 21 (AP).—Dutch Harrison, $78 a month buck sergeant in the Army Air Forces, hit the rainbow's pot of gold in the rich Charlotte Open golf tournament today, edging out Jug McSpaden by a single stroke with a 72-hole total of 275.

McSpaden made a great bid for a closing 70, two under par, but the popular soldier from the Greensboro, N. C., AAF station had enough left to get home in 73 despite slicing out of bounds on the seventy-first hole and leaving the door wide open for McSpaden.

One Shot Goes Wild

On the critical par five seventeenth, with Dutch one stroke ahead, two holes to go and thousands of fans lining the fairway, the Flying Arkansas Sawyer hit his tee shot into the road parallel, out of bounds. After this nerve-shattering blow, he played the second ball for a fine four on the 500-yard-long hole. McSpaden, just off the green in two shots, chipped short and needed two putts. His chance to get back the precious stroke was gone forever, for on the eighteenth Soldier Dutch hit the back of the green for a sure three and McSpaden chipped close for no better than a possible half. Harrison's rounds of 66, 70, 66, 73 gave him top money, a $2000 war bond in the $10,000 Inaugural meet.

McSpaden, the Philadelphia whiz and leading winner of the winter tour, never was over par, with rounds of 67, 71, 68, 70—276, 12 under par, but he never was ahead of Harrison. McSpaden's second prize amounted to $1500. The great Byron Nelson, back on his game, equalled Harrison's course record 66 and slid into third place at 279.

Craig Wood Fourth

Craig Wood of Mamaroneck, N. Y., the duration open champ, had 70 on the closing stretch for a 281 and fourth place.

Sam Byrd, the Navy-bound one-time Yankee outfielder, finished with a 73 for 283.

Jimmy Hines, the other of the veteran top notchers chasing Harrison to the wire, was sixth at 285 and a closing 73. Bob Hamilton of Evansville, Ind., the new North and South king, was seventh at 287, adding 71 to his three straight par 72s.

The leaders:
E. J. Harrison, Greensboro, N. C., 202, 73—275.
Jug McSpaden, Philadelphia, 206, 70—276.
Byron Nelson, Toledo, Ohio, 213, 66—279.

Assigned Double Duty

Carrasquel Joins Nats' Board Of Strategy as Interpreter

Alex Carrasquel, who used to tend strictly to his pitching for the Nats, now finds himself cast as an emergency member of the club's board of strategy. The big Venezuelan's asset is his native Spanish tongue, without which the Nats would be in desperate straightas this year.

ALEX CARRASQUEL

Carrasquel's chief function at this time at the College Park (Md.) camp, is to chaperon the half-dozen Cubans now on the squad, transmit the training orders of Manager Bluege and the coaches, and tell them what goes on in the babel of Spanish heard on the premises.

Aside from Santiago Ullrich, the 6-foot pitcher from Havana, none others of the latin contingent speak English and Carrasquel is the interlocutor. Ullrich put in a season at Danbury Conn., working in a hat factory and pitching for its ball team, and his English is almost adequate.

Carrasquel's particular pet among the Latin Legion is Juan Hernandez, which is understandable enough because Hernandez is a fellow Venezuelan, a right-handed pitcher when Carrasquet personally signed for the Nats during the winter.

Bluege Lauds Carrasquel

"If Carrasquel recommends him, this Hernandaze must be worth a trial," says Bluege. "Nobody can ever say that Carrasquel is not a smart baseball man. We saw that the first day he reported to our camp several years ago. He's a smart pitcher and he ought to know a prospect when he sees one."

Like all of the other Latin-Americans, Hernandez is green in the ways of pitching, but Bluege and his coaches are already impressed with the lad's fast ball. In fact, three of the Spanish-speaking colony have excited the Nats' bosses a bit. The others are Santiago Ullrich, also a pitcher, and Frank Quientis, outfielder-infielder.

Carrasquel will have a half-dozen more Cubans in his charge before the week is out, Bluege hopes. A plane-load is due from Havana in the care of Outfielder Roberto Ortiz, in fact they're overdue, and when they arrive Carrasquel will have the job of orientating them to baseball life in America.

Torres 19-Game Winner

With the Havana contingent are two men on whom Bluege is counting heavily. Big Roberto Ortiz has already been assigned a regular outfield job on the suspicion that he can hit big league pitching and has improved his outfielding. Also supposedly en route with him is Gilberto Torres, a skinny right-hander whose 19 wins for Chattanooga label him as something more

60 Turn Out For Baseball At Western

Coach Cliff Moore of Western High's baseball squad is probably the most fortunate of scholastic coaches this year with some 60 candidates reporting for the team.

Most schools throughout this area have been hit hard with the player shortage, with a lot of the youngsters lost to the services and others leaving their studies behind to indulge in defense work.

But the Red Raiders' mentor gives evidence in his smile that the future holds great possibilites for his Western nine and expects to turn out a top notch squad.

The large group will have to be cut down to about 18 or 20 players, thus a large quantity of newcomers will be filling in some last year's gaps left by mostly those who have graduated.

The Raiders will start their pre-season campaign journeying to Annapolis to play an exhibition contest with the Navy Plebes April 1, and have scheduled a game with Washington-Lee High School of Arlington, Va., April 6. The official season opener will see the Red Raiders meeting the Colts of Coolidge April 11 at the Western field.

Last year's vetetrans make up most of the squad with the backstop position about the only problem. However, Coach Moore expects to use Leonard Reed, who alternated at catching last year as the first-string mittman. Brian Bell, star gridiron halfback and top scorer in the interhigh football race last year, will perform at first base with George Conway, catcher and shortstop last year, expecting to fill in at second.

James Popham, veteran third baseman, will resume his former position and Jimmy Bissitt shows possibilities at shortstop.

In the outfield most of the coming season's work will rest on Harry Walker, Ollie Carter and Nick Chanaka, all of whom are first-stringers.

With more than nine members of the squad out for pitching berths, three of them veterans, Coach Moore is expecting one of the best hurling staffs in the city. However, most of the hurling will rest on Gene Gould and Randy Fones, veterans from last year.

Manager Bluege had his squad working outside in relays yesterday morning on the heels of the thaw which exposed the cinder track behind the big gymnasium. He routed out all of the players for jogs around the track, followed by bunting and throwing in the gymnasium.

The players were measured for uniforms by the Goldsmith Co. representatives yesterday, with Milo Candini holding the distinction of wearing the biggest, a size 48. . . . George Uhle believes he has a pitching prospect for the Nats in his son, George Uhle, jr., a 17-year-old right-hander who shows better than faint traces of his dad's fast ball. . . . Bobby Albertson, a sensation in the Detroit semipro league last summer, was famed both for his pitching and hitting, and Bluege may convert him into an infielder or outfielder if his batting warrants. . . . for some reason it has been hush-hush that Bill Lefebvre, big southpaw, won't join the Nats this season. . . . Lefebvre, who gained the approval of Bluege after joining the Nats late last season, has decided to stick to his Pawtucket, R. I., defense job

Knox Defends Trans-Arabian Oil Pipe Line

The proposed Trans-Arabian oil pipe line is important "both militarily and economically," Secretary Knox said yesterday, and its construction would mark a forward step in development of a "genuine foreign policy for this country."

The Navy Secretary attributed the opposition to the project to "a lot of selfish oil companies" and told a press conference the Navy is looking forward to a congressional investigation of the proposal because "we are anxious for a hearing."

Proposals have been made in both Senate and House for inquiries.

An "agreement in principle" for construction of a 1200-mile pipe line to link oil fields in Saudi Arabia with a Mediterranean port was announced by Secretary of Interior Ickes, as petroleum administrator for war, last January. The cost has been variously estimated at 150 million dollars or more.

Concessions in Saudi Arabia are held by Standard Oil of California and the Texas Co., and in Kuwait by the Gulf Oil Co. Under the agreement, they would reserve one billion barrels of oil for the United States Government and any purchases the Government made would be at 25 per cent below the prevailing market.

Knox said England had long had a foreign policy on oil but this country had not—"we have been exhausting our resources by selling abroad."

With construction of the pipeline, he said, there should be rigid restrictions of American oil to American use and a material curtailment of exports.

While important economically from the long-range standpoint, he said, the pipeline is primarily a military move. Some critics, he noted, have said it could not be completed in time to be of value in this war. By the same argument, he continued, the three 45,000-ton aircraft carriers the Navy has ordered might not be considered war construction but if the war ends before they are completed they will be "a kind of insurance" and he declared the pipeline is a comparable case.

CLAD METAL
The enemy was hit hard at Stalingrad . . . one of history's decisive battles; the turning-point of the war. Superb Russian courage, leadership and fighting skill were there . . . and worthy weapons. Countless millions of bullets, jacketed with SuVeneer Clad Metal, served these warriors effectively . . . penetrating deeper upon impact because tough steel is SuVeneer Clad Metal's base, instead of softer copper alloy. (The vital difference is measurable, indeed.)
During the shortage of strategic materials—at the request of our country's Ordnance Department—the Superior process for producing SuVeneer Clad Metal was made available to other companies without charge for the manufacture of bullet cups, for America and her Allies.

Last Employe of NRA Quits To Become Wac Buck Private

By Jean Craighead

The last of 4000 employes of the old NRA (National Recovery Administration) gave up the ghost recently, shipped the files to the Archives Building, and joined the Wacs.

Mrs. Mildred Steinmetz, who came from Connecticut, started to work for the Blue Eagle at its outset in 1933, and stuck by the battered symbol of national recovery long after the Supreme Court plucked its feathers and the President pronounced it dead.

In an isolated room at the top of the Commerce Building inaccessible by elevator, Mrs. Steinmetz kept the files in order, and was for years the only employe of the long forgotten agency.

Prosperity came around the corner, new and fascinating war agencies took over Washington, generals and admirals courted the Government, and thousands of war workers filled up the buildings and started new files.

Then one day Mrs. Steinmetz rose from her desk, and said: "I quit."

A few friends who remembered what she had done for the agency and the Government wrote her a "floral tribute" in appreciation of her achievements, and watched her go. The last feather fluttered out of the old bird, and lay still.

She is now a buck private at Camp Crowder, Mo., handling live-wire war business—and the NRA is officially nonexistent.

Soldier's Widow Accused Of Harboring Deserter

New York, March 21 (AP).—Mrs. Mario Iello, 24, widow of an American soldier killed in Tunisia a year ago, was arrested by the FBI yesterday on a charge of harboring an Army deserter, E. S. Conroy, agent in charge of the New York FBI office, announced.

Conroy said the woman admitted she harbored Arthur J. Pennino for about three months after the man allegedly failed to return to his Army post at the end of a 15-day furlough.

Woman Is Missing, 5 Injured in Albany Fire

Albany, N. Y., March 21 (AP).—Five firemen were injured, one fatally, and a woman was believed to have perished in a fire that destroyed six houses in a residential district early today.

The firemen were injured when a wall caved in. Mrs. Clara Griffis, a tenant, told police that her 54-year-old mother, Mrs. Lucy Remore, had not been located. The cause of the blaze was undetermined.

Altitude Chamber Aids Plane Tests Of Weather

Buffalo, N. Y., March 21 (AP).—An altitude chamber, which Curtiss-Wright Corp. spokesmen say is the "world's largest" and which will hold an entire single-engine fuselage or complete transport plane cabin, is in use at the plant's airplane division research laboratory.

The "jug" is 41 feet long and weighs 68 tons. Walls 9 inches thick and the latest vacuum and refrigeration equipment make possible simultaneous generation of the lowest temperatures and pressures not yet obtained in an altitude chamber.

Weather conditions found at 40,000 feet and higher can be combined with temperatures as low as 110 degrees below zero, spokesmen said.

IT TELLS HERE IN THE PAPER THAT THREE SEABEES WERE LOST IN THE JUNGLE AND TOOK TURNS PLAYING AN OCARINA FOR TWENTY DAYS, TILL THEY WERE RESCUED—
OH BOY—WHY DON'T WE SEND POP'S OLD HARMONICA TO SOME SOLDIER OVERSEAS!
WOW! THAT'S A PEACH OF AN IDEA! AND ALL WE HAVE TO DO IS TAKE IT TO MR MURPHY AT THE CANDY STORE WHERE WE GET OUR "COKE"—HE KNOWS JUST HOW TO SEND IT—
HOT DIGGETY—HERE'S OUR OLD ACCORDION TOO—AND LOOK! IT'S STILL GOOD—LET'S SEND THAT ALONG—
REMEMBER HOW UNCLE JIM USED TO PLAY "THE BLUE OF THE NIGHT" OVER AND OVER ON THIS—AND NOW HE'S 'WAY OUT IN GUADALCANAL WHERE THERE'S NO MUSIC AT ALL, I GUESS!
AND LOOK, JUDY, HERE'S THAT LITTLE FLUTE THAT YOU PLAYED IN THE FOURTH OF JULY PARADE—LET'S SEND IT ALONG—
COME ON, JIMMY—NOW LET'S COVER THE BLOCK AND SEE WHAT THE NEIGHBORS HAVE
DO YOU THINK THIS BIG BAZOOKA MIGHT SCARE A JAP, MR. MURPHY?
SURE THING, AND BELIEVE ME—SOME HOMESICK YANK WILL GIVE YOU KIDS A HAND FOR THIS—GOSH—HERE COMES THE "COKE" TRUCK FOR 'EM RIGHT NOW—
BE SURE TO GIVE MY FLUTE TO SOME NICE WAC
SURE THING—SIS!
COME ON, LET'S SING "MEMORIES" JUST ONCE MORE FOR WHOEVER IT WAS THAT REMEMBERED US WITH THESE SWELL SQUEEZE BOXES AND SWEET POTATO PIPES!

HERE'S HOW YOU CAN HELP!

Our boys in camp and overseas need musical instruments of all kinds—harmonicas, flutes, accordions, ocarinas, bazookas, pocket-size music-makers. Be a sport like Jimmy and Judy—ransack your home—and ask your neighbors for any unused instruments. Take them to your Coca-Cola dealer. Then the "Coke" truck will send them to Uncle Sam for our boys. Do it today!

It's natural for popular names to acquire friendly abbreviations. That's why you hear Coca-Cola called "Coke".

People are talking about the INSIDE War Stories in the new Post

SKULKING through the dark gray arctic night—the Scharnhorst made her way to the great Russia-bound convoy. With power to destroy in one hour as much shipping as the whole U-boat navy could blast in six months.

This is the historic story of her last hours . . . of the greatest duel of naval wits in this war . . . told from official Admiralty records, exclusively for Post readers.

It is a story that will lift you cheering to your feet . . . a revealing insight into the marvels of modern naval warfare . . . of tons of screaming shells reaching a six-mile target in the arctic gloom . . . of nerve-tingling, hair-raising drama that ended with the sinking of Germany's great sea-killer and sent a thousand men to death.

HOW THE BRITISH SANK THE SCHARNHORST

FROM THE EDITOR'S DESK

War's History in the Making!

THE story of the trapping and sinking by the British Navy of the German pocket battleship Scharnhorst, presents to Post readers one of those rare reading privileges that come seldom—even in war.

Probably no man could have written it with the authority of its author. C. S. Forester is perhaps the greatest living writer of sea stories.

This breath-taking true account of the last hours of the Scharnhorst—reconstructed by Mr. Forester from official Admiralty records—is the thrilling history of this war in the making. It is further evidence of the fact known to millions—that great things naturally come first to the new Post.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Higher Starting Pay For U. S. Posts Sought

Congress yesterday was asked to grant the Civil Service Commission authority to give higher starting salaries to certain classes of Federal workers. The appeal by the commission had the approval of the Administration. The commission now must start each new employe at the minimum of the grade to which he's assigned. What the commission wants, briefly, is the authority to split up each grade and assign employes to different salaries within the grade, based on their duties and responsibilities. For example, grade 2 ranges in salary from $1440 to $1800, but everyone recruited for a grade 2 job starts at the same salary—$1440—and it matters not what the duties are.

If Congress gives the commission the authority it wants, it could, for example, assign a typist who does a simple job like typing cards at a salary range from $1440 to $1620. But for more difficult typing work such as preparing and typing statistical tables the work could be graded from $1620 to $1800. There are wide gaps in the higher classification grades. They jump from $4600 to $5600, to $6500 and then to $8000. "It may happen," the commission explained in a letter to Congress, "that a qualified candidate is not interested in $4600, but would accept appointment at $5000." But this salary can't be paid to start now. It must be either $4600 or $5600, and as the commission pointed out, the agency may arrange its work to give the person $5600 to get him. "Such a practice," it said, "may result in distortions. Further, the salary offered may be somewhat larger than is necessary."

The commission would be able to pay $5000, $6000, $7000, and $7500 salaries if it gets the authority and it would make recruiting much easier. It made the point that within any one grade of the professional and scientific service can be found a wide range of jobs in engineering, law, medicine, agricultural and biological sciences; that stenographic, typing, office appliance, statistical and accounting positions among others will be found in any grade of the CAF service. What the commission proposes to do is to set up different salary scales within the grade for each of the types of jobs within the grade. In no event, however, would any rate for a class be below the minimum rate for the grade, nor above the maximum rate.

This isn't a new concept of the out-of-date Classification Act, as most people will believe. In fact, it was the intent of the act when it was written in 1923 that the commission should have the authority to fix starting salaries, based on responsibility, at any step within the grade. However, this was lost sight of during congressional debates on the bill, and when it became law the Attorney General was asked for a decision on the intent of Congress. The Attorney General replied that all employes must be started at the minimum of the grade and he was subsequently supported by the Comptroller General. Two years ago Congress was asked to give the commission the authority to set up new grades at $6000 and $7000, but someone thought this would give officials pay raises and the House knocked it out at the last moment. Now the commission is asking for broader authority over pay scales and it should get it.

Mortimer Kline has resigned as general counsel of the Petroleum Reserve Corporation to enter private law practice here. However, he'll be retained by Interior Secretary Ickes as a part-time special counsel for the Petroleum Administration for War to work on overseas problems, perhaps the proposed Arabian pipeline . . . State Secretary Hull has appealed to the President for the draft deferment of some of his young men in the foreign service . . . The staff of the Ramspeck Civil Service Committee is writing a hot report on the Army-Navy Electronics agency. There'll be fewer unknown soldiers out of this war. The fingerprints of seven unidentified soldiers who were killed in the Italian campaign were sent to the Identification Division of the Federal Bureau of Investigation here recently by the War Department. This unit made six positive identifications.

As the House Civil Service Committee prepared to report favorably the Starnes bill, the National Civil Service Reform League called on the President not to push the bill in its present form. The bill, the league said, "fails to impose certain minimum requirements that ought to be part of any preference scheme." It asked that all veterans be required to attain at least a passing mark in examinations before being given added credit; that no veteran should have the right to be placed at the top of the list regardless of his final competitive rating (disabled vets now go to the top of the list), and that any credits should be added to qualified ratings and standing on the list determined by such augmented ratings. "Nobody," the league said, "will have a greater stake in the effectiveness and competence of Government service after the war than the veterans themselves. Their own interests peculiarly require that Government service be the best possible."

Schwartz Made Head Of Wardens

Max C. Schwartz, 718 Shepherd st. nw., assistant chief of the Air Raid Warden Service for the last year and a half, was named chief of the service last night, succeeding William J. Mileham, who resigned to enter the United States Navy.

SCHWARTZ

Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of the Department of Civilian Defense for the District, announced Mileham's successor and presented a certificate of merit to the retiring official. The citation recognized Mileham's services rendered first as a member of the Warden Service for Civilian Defense in the District and Metropolitan Area and later as deputy warden of the mid-city area before he was appointed chief air raid warden for the District.

Other speakers who paid tribute to the new and retiring chiefs at a meeting at the Air-Raid Warden Service headquarters, 1341 Maryland ave. ne., included Porter Lumpkins and Thomas Randall, assistants to the director of Civilian Defense in the District; George Keneip, formerly assistant director of Civilian Defense; Sergt. John Ryan of the Police Department; Former Chief Clement Murphy of the ARWS; Leslie Rucker, formerly executive assistant; Col. Leonce Legendre, executive assistant to the coordinator of Civilian Defense; Harry N. Stull, executive assistant of Warden Service, and ARWS Assistant Chiefs Sylvan King, Gorman Prince and Heywood Saunders.

Trial Board To Report on Maghan Today

A decision by the civilian trial board conducting a hearing on a charge of drunkenness against Robert J. Maghan, jr., is expected to be handed to Maj. Edward J. Kelly at 10:30 a. m. today, it was revealed yesterday after the week-long hearing was brought to a close.

Miss Amelia Kosmos, Maghan's sister-in-law, testified yesterday that Maghan had stopped at her home the night before his arrest to pick up the battle of liquor alleged to be the same one which was later found in his car.

She said the bottle had been given to her by a friend and that she wanted Maghan to take it to his home, where she was going to hold a party later in the week. Miss Kosmos told the board she could not entertain at her own home because her mother was ill and that she frequently had her parties at the home of her sister and brother-in-law.

Maghan had two drinks from the bottle, as he had admitted previously to the board, and she had taken one, Miss Kosmos said, before he left her home shortly after midnight.

Miss Kosmos was the only witness to testify.

Defense Attorney James J. Laughlin asked that Maj. Edward Kelly, Inspector Robert J. Barrett and James T. Beckett be called as witnesses on the ground they were biased and prejudiced in the Maghan matter. The prosecution, however, showed that Kelly and Barrett were not involved in the charge and the request that Beckett be called was withdrawn by the defense.

Move to Speed Kronheim Hearing Made

A stipulation agreement between attorneys today may shorten the current Federal Trade Commission hearing to determine whether Milton S. Kronheim & Sons, Inc., wholesale liquor dealers, have used "unfair and coercive" methods, it appeared last night.

Floyd O. Collins, commission attorney, said he would be willing to "accept a stipulation that the rest of the District's liquor dealers, if called by the company attorneys, would testify to exactly the same things as have the others." So far, there have been more than 100 defense witnesses, each of whom has sworn that he was not forced by the Kronheim company to buy wines and other alcoholic beverages in order to get hard liquor.

Alvin L. Newmyer, company attorney, has threatened to call all the liquor dealers in the District and has made a good start. Yesterday's witnesses totaled 17, even though the hearing adjourned earlier than usual, at shortly after 1 p. m.

"We may agree to a stipulation in order to save time," Newmyer said.

Both attorneys agreed that any stipulation would allow Collins the right to cross-examine defense witnesses.

Women Carry Mail

Three women started out on trial routes as mail carriers after volunteering to replace drafted postmen here and said they expected to have no difficulty in getting accustomed to the new routine. They were Mrs. Lena Pemberton, Mrs. Emily Coeyman and Miss Johnnie Freeman, all of whom have been employed by the Postoffice Department for some time.

They wore regulation caps with visors, gray shirts, black ties, dark shirts and low-heeled shoes.

Minus Bankroll

Dawson Held 4th Time in Petty Theft

Harry Dawson, 65, retired real estate dealer, was arrested yesterday for the fourth time in the last few months for stealing change from a newsstand, but he appeared in Municipal Court without the usual roll of money.

Dawson, who on the three occasions of arrest for the same offense prior to this was carrying more than $1000, had only $5.80 with him yestetrday, police said.

He was arrested after Walter B. Ale of 1309 N st. nw., who operates a newsstand at 17th and H sts. nw., said he saw Dawson snatch money lying on a pile of newspapers, and gave chase, aided by several policemen.

Dawson was arraigned in Municipal Court before Judge Thomas D. Quinn and pleading not guilty, was ordered held under $1000 bond. He demanded a jury trial which was set for April 4. Police said he is under bail at present awaiting a jury trial set for April 6 on a similar charge of petty larceny.

Alibi Witness Testifies for Mrs. Dolmage

Justice Matthew F. McGuire excluded two teen-age boys yesterday from the District Court trial of Mrs. Frances Dolmage, charged with the theft of jewelry worth $61,000, with the explanation that "there is nothing funny in here."

Testimony at the close of the previous day's session bore on the question of whether Mrs. Dolmage had been intimate with Otis Beall Kent, from whose apartment she is accused of taking the valuables.

An alibi-witness, Harry H. Gardiner, 1015 N st. nw., friend of Mrs. Dolmage and her husband, testified he had been with Mrs. Dolmage at the hour the jewelry was supposed to have been stolen.

Previous testimony had revealed that an elevator operator in Kent's apartment building saw a woman leaving his apartment with a black bag between 8:30 and 9 the morning of July 28 last.

Gardiner first declared he accompanied Mrs. Dolmage that morning to the office building where she worked and noted the lobby clock read 9:15 as he left her. He told the jury he was positive of the hour.

Later he changed his testimony saying, "thinking back over it," he was sure the clock had read 8:45 when he saw Mrs. Dolmage take the elevator to her office.

Dr. M. M. Dolmage, the defendant's husband, took the stand again and said that when Kent visited his office June 10, in regard to dental work, Mrs. Dolmage was not present. Mrs. Dolmage's statement was that she had been present.

Her husband also said he did not know Mrs. Dolmage had a key to Kent's apartment. Kent claimed the key was taken without his permission.

5 Juveniles Blamed for 60 Crimes Here

Five juvenile boys, ranging in age from 12 to 16 years, were awaiting action by juvenile authorities last night following their arrest Monday on more than 60 charges of arson, housebreaking and the destruction of private and public property, police at the Twelfth Precinct reported yesterday.

The boys, who live in the Northeast section of the District, organized a "Nero Smith" club several months ago, according to Precinct Detective Daniel J. Slattery and Police Officer Ernest Jefferson, who have been investigating their petty crimes. Both the club and the crimes of its members were inspired by a motion picture, Slattery said.

The first offenses took place back in October of 1943, when the boys began turning in false alarms. Then they committed a series of housebreakings and also began destroying railroad property. Police said several times they had disconnected battery signal devices and had torn out telephone communications of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co. Last week, according to police, the boys set fire to a barn in the Brookland-Michigan Park area, which resulted in the complete destruction of the building. Frequently, the boys have turned on fire hydrants in the Northeast section and they have destroyed numerous street lights, police said.

Headquarters for the juveniles was the home of a 16-year-old boy said to be the ring leader of the gang. His home also was used as a hiding place for the loot which the boys collected, police said.

To Receive Charter

U. S. Maritime Post 47, American Legion, will receive its charter from Department officials tonight at 8:15 at the Legion Clubhouse, 2437 Fifteenth st. nw.

Traffic Toll Raised to 18 By 2 Deaths

D. C. traffic deaths to date . . 18
Deaths this date last year . . 18
Total deaths last year 97

One person was killed when his car was struck at 4th and G sts. nw. by a streetcar early yesterday and his companion was in critical condition at Casualty Hospital last night, while a pedestrian struck by an auto late Monday night died yesterday at Freedmen's Hospital. The death of the two men brought the number of traffic deaths in the District to 18 for this year, same number as at this date in 1943.

Albert V. Hodge, 35, of 2920 8th st. ne., was operating his car south on 4th st. nw. when it collided with a Capital Transit Co. streetcar going west on G st.

Police and fire rescue squads worked for more than half an hour with blow torches and hack saws to remove the body from the car. The victim was pronounced dead on arrival at Casualty Hospital.

His companion, Eugene L. Rocca, 42, of 1342 Irving st. nw., also was taken to Casualty Hospital, suffering from critical head and internal injuries.

According to police, the car was carried about 75 feet by the impact and the front wheels of the streetcar were thrown off the tracks.

The operator of the streetcar, police said, was Wilmer C. Moore, 42, of 646 F st. se., who has had 22 years' experience.

Edgar Cole, Negro, 47, of 2360 6th st. nw., died yesterday at Freedmen's Hospital, where he was taken Monday night after he was struck by a car at Georgia ave. and Gresham pl. nw. The car was operated by James Johnson, Negro, 40, of 2907 Georgia ave. nw., according to police.

Census Official To Testify in Pepco Case

The Potomac Electric Power Co. rate hearing before the Public Utilities Commission was resumed yesterday for a two-hour session largely devoted to cross-examination of company and commission witnesses by Harry R. Booth, attorney representing the Treasury Department.

The PUC is slated to hear Dr. Philip M. Hauser, associate director of the Census Bureau, present "data on the economic characteristics of Washington" when it reconvenes tomorrow afternoon.

Commissioner Gregory Hankin asked, during the session, that the power company furnish copies of all yearly renewal agreements between 1924 and 1936 of the Great Falls power site contract between the power company and the Washington Railway & Electric Co. Chairman James Flanagan ruled that a certified statement from the board of directors' secretary giving the actions of the board and dates would be sufficient.

In his cross examination of Harold G. Hayden, Pepco comptroller, Booth contended that the company had underestimated its revenue by $22,000 in the first two months of the year, under the 1944 budget.

V. A. McElfresh, PUC chief account.t, told Booth that the unweighted amount in excess of original cost remaining in the rate base as of December 31, 1943, was $5,581,713.76.

City News in Brief

Police Find 2 Shooting Victims, Seek Motive

After an 18-hour search, police last night found the two men shot in a restaurant early Tuesday and charged George J. Mohr, 38, of 1139 Irving st. nw., with assault with a dangerous weapon. He was released under $2000 bond for a hearing March 28 in Municipal Court.

Shot while in the Lindo Restaurant, 2811 14th st. nw., the two men, according to police, had refused any treatment until taken into custody last night. They were Russell W. Harrison, 25, shot in the [illegible] C. Worley, 25, shot through both arms. Both remain at 2129 K st. nw. They were sent to Gallinger Hospital under guard and booked as Government witnesses.

According to Patrolman Spencer R. Rullson, he arrived at the restaurant to find Mohr holding a smoking .22-caliber revolver, but with the victims vanished. Police were still seeking, last night, a reason for the shooting as well as why the wounded men did not seek treatment.

Canteen Collects Fat

The Stage Door Canteen has collected 100 pounds of waste fat at the food bar during the past month which will be turned over to salvage authorities today, it was announced yesterday. The canteen has set this record for the past six months. Mrs. May Redmond Smith directs the food bar where service men are served free of charge.

2 Forfeit $25 Each

Two men each forfeited $25 collateral yesterday in Municipal Court on a charge of selling in a public space two tickets to Monday's fights at Turner's Arena. They were Francis Xavier Battiste, 24, of 165 Uhland Terrace ne., and John M. Hamilton, 22, 902 Evarts st. ne.

Precinct Detective N. Bonaccorsy said the two men approached him and Detective T. G. Walter, and that while the detectives were reaching for their wallets, at the same time trying to keep their badges from showing, one of the youths exclaimed: "Hurry up, hurry up, there's a cop across the street."

To Address Bar Group

The Greek Ambassador to the United States, Cimon P. Diamantopoulos, will be guest speaker at the luncheon meeting of the Federal Bar Association today at Schneider's Cafe. Judge George D. Neilson of Municipal Court is chairman of the unit.

Bill Would Aid Clerks

Service in the armed forces would not cause clerks for members of Congress or other employes of the legislative branch of the Government to lose credit for continuity of employment toward a civil service status under provisions of a bill introduced yesterday by Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio). Legislative employes are now required to work four years before being eligible for a civil service status.

38 Join Predraft Class

Thirty-three men registered last night at Central High School for preinduction training classes to be opened next Monday for men who expect to enter the armed forces. Joint sponsors of the eight-week course are the District Recreation Department, the District Chapter of the American Red Cross and the National Rifle Association.

Registration also will be held tonight and Wednesday at Central High School. Classes for draft-age men from 17 to 38 include swimming, marksmanship, hand-to-hand combat fighting and first aid.

6 Erroneously Listed

Six of the 14 persons listed by the OPA as having failed to appear before their ration boards to explain unindorsed gasoline coupons actually did appear and were told that "everything was satisfactory," OPA officials said yesterday.

Gasoline rations assigned to these persons were revoked before the error was discovered, according to Charles K. Davies, [illegible] ing officer for the District OPA office. These will be restored to the motorists, he added.

How the mistake occurred in the first place was not explained, but Davies said yesterday that, "Through an unfortunate error, six persons whose names were released as not having appeared at their boards, did in fact report there within the five-day period and exhibited their coupons properly indorsed."

Fire in Restaurant

Hundreds of people gathered last night outside Bassin's Restaurant, 1349 E st. nw., when a fire broke out in the basement there, causing much smoke and damage estimated at $500 by the Fire Department.

The fire was caused by an oil burner, it was said, in the empty restaurant which is being remodeled. Firemen used gas masks to get at the flames, which spread briefly under the floor of the liquor store at 1347 E st. nw.

Delinquency Discussion

The second in a series of roundtable discussions on preventive measures in combating juvenile delinquency in Southeast Washington will take place at 8 o'clock tonight at Friendship House, 619 D st. se.

The mediation board for the proceedings, which will be patterned after radio's Town Hall program, includes Dr. Francis McPeek of the Federation of Churches, Miss Jessie Coope, assistant superintendent of schools, and representatives of the Parent-Teacher Association and Friendship House.

Rep. Smith Assails FHA

Representative Frederick C. Smith (R., Ohio), delivered an address opposing the Federal Housing Administration at a meeting last night of the Lincoln Park Citizens Association at the Epworth M. E. Church, 13th st. and North Carolina ave. ne.

Smith said the FHA was forcing slum clearance projects in areas of Washington which needed no improvements, and when such action was opposed by the people.

The association voted against the request of the National Capital Housing Authority for a 20-year, 100 million-dollar fund to reclaim blighted areas.

Aid War Zone Children

Children who have been evacuated to other zones from the warring nations are not only in need of food and clothing and medical supplies but the materials for education must also be supplied them, the Junior Red Cross indicated yesterday in announcing the shipment of $6000 in school supplies ready for shipment to the Middle East.

Fever Total Increases

Scarlet fever cases in Washington, Alexandria and the adjacent Maryland counties totaled 2514 from the first of the year as 38 new cases were reported yesterday. Twenty-eight additional cases brought Washington's total to 1899, with 711 quarantined.

Alexandria reported one new case of scarlet fever with five of the city's 55 cases since January 1 quarantined. Montgomery County recorded three new cases and a total of 375, while Prince Georges County had six additional cases, making the total 185.

Firemen's Bill Hearing

Efforts of the Commissioners to get a raise in pay for a select group of officers in the District [illegible] will be considered today by a House District subcommittee.

Starting at 10:30 a. m. the subcommittee will open hearings on a bill to equalize the pay of its Fire Department captains, lieutenants and sergeants with that of officers of a similar rank in the Police Department.

A similar bill was placed on the Senate calendar yesterday at the direction of the District Committee which last week ordered it favorably reported.

To Direct Wave Band

Wave Petty Officer Gloria Link will direct the first Wave band in this area at its initial performance tonight in Wave quarters at D st., Massachusetts and Nebraska ave. nw. The 8 p. m. performance will be open to Waves and their guests only. Miss Link, the daughter of Everett M. Link of 3701 16th st. nw., also directs the Wave glee club.

The 48-piece band has rehearsed under a complicated "shift" basis, the Navy said yesterday, because of the different schedules of its Wave members. Officers in charge of tonight's debut will be Lieut (j.g.) Marya Welch and Ensign Ida Teatter.

Attend Press Convention

Twelve members of the editorial staff of the Easterner, school newspaper of Eastern High School, leave for New York today to attend the Columbia Press Convention, at Columbia University. These delegates are accompanied by Dr. Regis L. Boyle, adviser to the paper, and Mrs. Judith Watkins, Spanish instructor.

Representing Eastern High School will be the editor, Doris Adair; managing editor, Edward Barr; associate editor, Mildred Bailey; art editor, Jeanne MacDonald; feature editor, Malcolm Rose; proofreader, Mary Ellen McGill; assistant editors, Louise Torbett, Shirley Oakley and Frances Pitckett; and reporters, Erna Embrey, Shirley Tatelman and Betty Lou Mann.

Dahlgren Citizens Meet

The Dahlgren Terrace Citizens Association met last night at the Crosby-Noyes School, 10th and Franklin sts. ne.

The president, William H. Luers, was elected a delegate to the Federation of Citizens Associations. Community buying, victory gardens, a clean-up campaign and real estate covenants were discussed.

Gas Coupons Stolen

Thieves entered a gasoline filling station at 2801 Alabama ave. se. early yesterday and made off with 500 gallons worth of gasoline coupons, according to Joseph A. Judge, the proprietor. Judge told police the thieves gained entrance by forcing a window.

Sixty-three small radios and other equipment valued at $200 were stolen by thieves from a radio shop at 616 4th st. sw. early yesterday, according to Charles Gardell, the proprietor.

Members of the Petworth Citizens Association met last night and planned ways to help their neighborhood fill its $1900 Red Cross quota.

Lenes B. Passmore, president, said the group also supported the Russian war relief project to fill emergency household kits for the aid of Russians now returning to their homes.

Playgrounds and recreational areas for Petworth were discussed and a congratulatory resolution was adopted which will be sent to Max Schwartz, new chief air raid warden for the District.

Bill to Slash Fire Rates Is Approved

By James E. Chinn

A slashing reduction in Washington fire insurance rates—estimated to save policyholders at least $1,000,000 a year—is anticipated by a bill unanimously approved yesterday by a House District subcommittee.

The proposed legislation is designed to give the superintendent of insurance of the District instead of the insurance companies authority to fix and control rates—rates that are now so far out of adjustment that it is said the companies take 69 cents of every premium dollar for profit and expenses.

Another Insurance Bill

The committee also approved another bill—one that already has passed the Senate—which would lessen the prescribed punishment for minor violations of the existing insurance laws. A money penalty ranging up to a maximum fine of $200 is proposed as an alternative for one that calls for mandatory revocation or suspension of a company's license to do business in the District.

This situation is bad, District officials said, "because the superintendent of insurance sometimes is faced with the alternative of ignoring minor violations, with the consequent danger of breeding disrespect for the law, or of imposing a sentence entirely out of proportion to the seriousness of the offense."

The approved rate control bill was introduced by Representative Clinton P. Anderson (D., N. Mex.). He appeared before the subcommittee and effectively blocked arguments by District officials for approval of a similar Senate measure sponsored by Senator Pat McCarran (D., Nev.). Although the Senate has passed the McCarran bill, its relay to the House was stymied on a parliamentary move of Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) who has a motion pending [illegible] reconsideration.

Anderson, who was in the general insurance business before coming to Congress, argued vigorously that the McCarran measure was "pretty bad" and would not pave the way for a substantial reduction in fire insurance rates.

"My endeavor is to get a fair rate for the public," he declared. "The Senate bill does not begin to do the job."

Pointing out that the cost of fire insurance would be based under his plan on the adequacy of "rates" and not on the adequacy of "profits" as proposed by McCarran, Anderson charged:

"If the insurance companies doing business in the District had an interest in the reasonableness of rates and not the adequacy of profit, they would have voluntarily reduced rates years ago. Yet they have taken a million dollars a year out of the District and no one has raised a finger."

Jordan Takes Exception

Albert F. Jordan, District superintendent of insurance, quickly took exception to that statement. "For 20 years—for 40 years—the District has raised its finger in that general direction," he declared.

An analysis of premiums and losses on fire and lightning insurance in the District over a period of 20 years showed a total loss ratio of 31.5 per cent. Premiums paid during that period amounted to more than 43 million dollars, while losses totaled 13 million dollars or 30 million dollars less than the premiums paid.

Advised of the favorable action of the subcommittee on the fire insurance bill, Representative Jennings Randolph (D., W. Va.), called a special meeting tomorrow of the full committee which he heads to get its approval, so the measure can be rushed to the House calendar.

'Girl Break' Dances Come To USO Clubs

The really big news in Washington yesterday was that girl-break dances are being introduced by the USO.

Instead of hugging the wall and hoping some man will rescue her, under the new system a girl can look over the floor and break in on any nimble stepper who catches her fancy.

Girl-break dances were received enthusiastically at Leap Year parties last month. Most of the 16 USO clubs with dancing will permit girl breaking intermittently and it is expected the system will become more popular as additional men are sent overseas.

Comments in the female stag line run something like this: "That's a honey of a dancer over there. . . . Do you see that 6-foot broad-shouldered beauty from Texas? . . . That boy over in the corner is really going to town on jitterbug."

Two lieutenants from Fort Belvoir who attend regularly commented enthusiastically on girl-break dances at the Officers Dance Club, Gadsby's Tavern, Alexandria.

Lieut. Henry Winkey:

"Sure, I like girl-break dances. There's no reason why a girl should stand against the wall any more than a man. And besides, it livens up the party."

Lieut. Edward Axelson:

"It turns the tables on the men to have the girls looking us over as we dance."

From this system come female wolves—or at least other competing women in the stag line describe some of their sister cutters in this fashion.

Soroptimists Plan Luncheon Meeting Today

The Soroptimist Club will have as its guest speakers at the weekly luncheon today at the Willard Hotel, Mrs. A. F. Harlan and Mrs. Luta S. Ferrell. Mrs. Harlan will speak on the different races and nationalities that came to this country in sufficient numbers to leave an impression on our culture and civilization beginning with the discovery of America by Columbus down to the present day; and Mrs. Ferrell will illustrate the talk by displaying dolls to represent the races. There will be an exhibit of 200 dolls. The topic of the speech will be "We Who Are America."

The club is collecting books for a library to be placed in the Red Cross building of St. Elizabeth's Hospital. Some 500 books are to make up this library, and the remainder of this collection will be assembled at the Wednesday meeting which is designated as Book Day.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Bride, a Government Employe During Husband's Absence Overseas, Works Overtime at Employer's Request, and Is Unjustly Slandered by His Wife

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 23 years of age and have been married since last October. My husband, who is an Army officer, went overseas just before Christmas. In February, I discovered that I was pregnant. Recently, the man who is my immediate supervisor in the Government agency where I work, involved me in a terrible situation. It happened this way: He asked me to help him complete a special report, working overtime. It was quite late when we finished the job, and he suggested driving me home. En route, we stopped at a restaurant for a sandwich. While we were there, the man's wife came in and made a great issue of our being together.

This seemed only unpleasant, at the time; but three weeks ago, I discovered that she (the supervisor's wife), is related to my husband (they are cousins); and she means to make trouble for me. I have written my husband, explaining exactly what happened,—only to discover that the wife had already written him, submitting strong circumstantial evidence that her husband had been carrying on an affair with me. Obviously, he actualy has been having an affair with some woman; and the wife believes I am that woman. She has even insinuated that the child I am expecting is not my husband's.

I have not yet heard from my husband. You can see why I am beside myself with anguish. I love my husband deeply and can't bear the thought of causing him unnecessary unhappiness, when he is already enduring the trials of a man at war. From all appearances, the supervisor's wife does not have a mean and spiteful nature. She really believes I am the woman who is breaking up her home. And from what I have heard recently, my husband has much respect for her. I have tried to talk with her and write to her, but she will not see me and returns my letters unopened.

I have considered resigning my position, since being told that a transfer is impossible, due to my special training. Yet I can hardly afford to resign, because I am contributing to the support of my semi-invalid mother. I have cabled my husband twice and still do not hear from him. Also, I have tried again to persuade my supervisor to straighten out the situation, but he is anxious to protect his mistress and will not help me. I am at my wits' end. Perhaps you or one of your readers can help me find the solution to my problem.

M. N. W.

An Inconsistency In Girl's Story

DEAR M. N. W.: There is one glaring inconsistency in your story which makes me wonder if the whole thing is a fabrication. The inconsistency is this,—you say (1) that you have written to your husband, explaining exactly what happened; (2) that you have heard nothing from him, in reply, on the subject; (3) that the supervisor's wife refuses to tolerate any exchange with you in the matter; and,—here comes the flabbergasting contradiction,—(4) that, nevertheless, you have discovered that the supervisor's wife has confronted your husband, by mail, with strong circumstantial evidence that her husband has been carrying on an affair with you. If you cannot establish communication with your husband or with her, since the "terrible situation" developed, how can you say, for a fact, that you know what representations she has urged on him? If I am to accept your problem as real, having crushing face-value for you, I can only assume that the supervisor himself has been keeping you posted on that side of the picture.

Taking your story at face value, then, here are my reactions: Your blameless conscience, in the circumstances, constitutes the best insurance against social injury at the hands of the supervisor's jealous, victim-hunting wife. Being guiltless of culpable action or unethical intent,—your only mistake: that of innocently inferring that your boss was a man of orthodox character and performance, whose company or escort was a credential of respectability in itself,—you must not allow yourself to get anxiously excited, nor permit anyone to force you apologetically on the defensive, because you obliged his request to assist with a "rush" piece of overtime work, and, on completing the job at a late hour, accepted his (in the circumstances, proper) offer to see you safely home. Nor, to the righteous-thinking mind, was there anything untoward in stopping with him at a restaurant on the way home, for a well-earned bite to eat.

Don't Smooth Feathers Of Your False Accuser

THE ONLY thing "wrong" with the whole business, as it turns out, was the "wrong" history of the boss himself,—a history of intrigue which already had his wife grimly suspicious and hot on his trail to catch him red-handed with his habitual conspirator. The minute she barged in on you with accusatory air, you should have had the presence-of-mind to hurl a bolt of outraged indignation at both of them, for his crass inconsideration and her vulgar and much-mistaken presumption in dragging you into their sordid quarrel of obviously long-standing. You might have said to her, in effect: "I don't know what's back of all this. I can only guess. But if it is your misfortune to be married to a man you have reason to think is a bounder, it is equally my misfortune that he happens to be supervisor in our office; and that I never dreamed, until now, that he wasn't a completely respectable person. If I had had any idea that he wasn't on the level,—in anybody's mind,—you may be very sure, both of you, that I wouldn't be here, now. Mr. Blank is entirely responsible for this situation, in giving me overtime work to do tonight,—and I feel that both of you owe me an apology for this disgraceful scene." So saying, you should have bowed yourself coldly out,—thus completely turning the tables on the fire-breathing wife.

You still can,—and definitely should,—bring this personally antiseptic attitude to bear on the incident. It was a mistake to try to compel the wife's understanding of a situation in which you were blameless. Secure in your knowledge of uncensurable behavior, you should have let her think what she would. Such should be your reaction from now on. To put your husband right, in case of false rumor, one straightforward letter, honestly stating the imbroglio in which you had innocently figured, would have been enough; and you should have rested quietly, on the support of a clear conscience, for his acknowledgment of the report,—even though it was months in coming. In bombarding him with repetitive statements of your side of the case, and urgent pleas for a vote of confidence, you have weakened your position in his eyes,—provided he is in receipt of all your letters and cables. Drop the subject with him, as with his cousin. If he is disposed to trust you, he will,—when given a breathing spell to digest your testimony versus the wild counter-charges.

How to Face Possibility Of Bridegroom's Distrust

IF HE IS SO little your friend as to side against you, on his cousin's "say-so," in this crucial hour, then your love and protective concern for his feelings in the situation, are being wasted on a worthless recipient. The positive attitude to take toward him, from now on, is to assume that he is on trial, in relation to you, since receiving his cousin's slanderous letters and your truthful rebuttal; and that his verdict, for or against you, will amount to judgment passed on himself. On the last point, about the job,—give it up, by all means, as an obligatory gesture of self respect. What ignoramus, or false friend, told you that your training is so "special" that a transfer is impossible? Your supervisor, maybe? Bring your request,—and the chafing reason for it,—to the attention of an Employe Counsellor; and I fancy a transfer will be arranged.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Meet Excise Taxes With Thrift and Reconditioning

By Martha Ellyn

Arithmetic may not be one of your native talents, but come April 1 most persons will be doing extra figuring to make family budgets balance. Starting on that date, excise taxes will be imposed upon many commodities.

These levies will boost the cost of living for nearly everyone. That is unless cleansing cream, lipstick, shampoos, shaving cream, pocketbooks and a host of other items that are a part of everyday life are eliminated.

Here is information given out by OWI that illustrates by comparison what certain commodities formerly cost and what they will cost after April with the new excise taxes:

	Base Price	Price With Tax
Jar cleansing cream	$3.00	$3.60
Piece of jewelry	75.00	90.00
Fur coat	500.00	600.00
Home telephone service	3.50	4.03
Long distance call	1.50	1.88
Telegram	1.00	1.25
Movie ticket	.40	.48
Theater ticket	1.50	1.80
Railroad ticket	10.00	11.50

What is the homemaker to do about these increases? Watch her "p's" and "q's." Make every purchase count. Think twice before you buy once. After making a purchase be sure to use the item with care so there won't be unnecessary repetition.

Avoid Unnecessary Purchases

Make sure that you are buying the type of cleansing cream which is suited to your skin. Make every dab count. If you think it will stay in better condition by keeping it in the refrigerator do so. Keep nailpolish, as well as all other cosmetics, tightly closed. Use your lipstick to the last stroke. Application by brush will help to conserve it, for you can use it to the last bit.

Watch the clasps, prongs and general condition of jewelry. A pin or ring without a stone is not attractive. A broken clasp on necklace or beads may let it roll away into oblivion.

Take care of your purses. Don't overcrowd them so that seams rip and fasteners and zippers give under pressure. Clean often to keep away accumulated dust or powder from spoiling the linings. Many a good purse has been discarded because of a soiled or frayed lining. Repair shops may be able to reclaim an errant zipper or a broken wrist cord.

If your fur coat shows a rip, see that it is mended immediately. Store all furs away from moth and heat so that their life will be prolonged. Clean furs too will last longer.

Recondition every household item that it is possible to do so. Soiled upholstery can usually be cleaned so that it is in usable condition. Don't discard furniture because of sagging springs and frayed upholstering. It is not an unsurmountable task to recondition furniture.

If your table lamps come to that dejected state, stop and consider if they can't be freshened. Perhaps a clean shade will do the trick. Or look in the attic, cellar, basement, garage or any other places that discarded household items are stored, and perhaps you will bring to light an attractive old lamp which can give a new decorative note to a room.

Reconditioning of a Lamp

On a recent visit to a summer cottage I spied a brass coal oil lamp of graceful lines. I could see through the tarnished coating that it was an item to be desired. It was mine for the carting away of it. Then came the reconditioning. The warm color, soft sheen and decorative pattern which I restored to the lamp was worth many times the effort put forth to recondition it. This was the procedure:

Add linseed oil to rottenstone until the mixture is like heavy cream. Apply this mixture with soft cloth and rub until tarnish disappears. A soft brush is used on carved design and embossing. Wipe off application with soft cloth that is dipped into linseed oil. Any excess oil may be wiped off with soft cloth. Then rub with flannel polishing cloth. This process gives a soft, dull finish. However, if a bright finish is desired, apply a good quality metal polish, let it dry thoroughly and then rub with a soft cloth until a deep luster appears.

If you don't want to polish decorative brass objects frequently, a protective coating of clear lacquer may be applied. First, remove all tarnish. Wash in hot soapy water. Rinse thoroughly in clear, hot water. Dry thoroughly. Apply denatured alcohol to the surface and let dry. Next apply water-white transparent metal lacquer with a paint brush or spray on the entire surface.

The soft, restful radiance of a lamp may make your home more attractive to you when you go to it at the end of a tiring day. If you can't find a lamp to your liking because of wartime shortages, perhaps you can unearth one from an old hiding place. The attractive one shown here is a reconditioned oil lamp. This is the kind that sheds its light on radiant Singer Ginny Simms

Railroads Need Women

To employ the 61,000 more women which ODT feels could be successfully placed on American railroads, it would be necessary for all Class I railroads to increase the number of their women employes to 12 per cent of their total payroll. On four of the country's major roads, the proportion of women is already 12 per cent or more, but on others they run as low as 2.8 per cent.

Sleeping in Soft Bed May Cause Backache

By Ida Jean Kain

Nobody is going in for very soft living these days, but you may be sleeping too soft for your own good health. A conservative psysiotherapist I know declares our luxury soft mattresses are to blame for a high percentage of the backs that need treatment. So if your back aches when you wake up in the morning it is quite possible that your mattress is letting you down.

It's the sagging of your spine that strains your back muscles and makes you feel tired and achey in the morning. But the cure is not to rush out and buy a new and harder mattress. You can fix things just by placing a board between the mattress and the springs.

You'll Get Used to It

If you are used to sleeping on a soft bed, it may take a few nights to get accustomed to your bed board. But you will find yourself feeling so much better for it that nobody could pay you to go back to the old arrangement.

As a matter of fact, these anti-backache boards have proved so successful that one company makes a business of manufacturing them —some with hinges, so they can be folded, for traveling salesmen!

Another cause of chronic backache is a difference in leg lengths. The difference in length may be almost imperceptible and yet be enough to throw your spine out of alignment.

To overcome this, place a felt pad in the heel of the shoe for the short leg. The pad must be of such thickness as to build you up to the right height on that side but an orthopedic specialist or a good osteopath can tell you what thickness to have the pad.

Choose Exercises Carefully

If your back is not very strong, you should be careful about your exercises. When the weakness is in the lower back, all twisting at the waist should be strictly avoided. So should the old, familiar exercise of lying on your back on the floor with legs straight down and slowly raising and lowering the legs.

There are plenty of less strenuous exercises for you, and some of them are excellent for strengthening your muscular girdle so that it is natural to pull up with the lower abdominal muscles. That saves your back.

Here are two: Lie on your back on the floor—legs straight down, arms down at sides—and flex right knee to chest as you raise left arm up above head and rest it on floor beyond. Return to starting position and repeat with left leg, right arm.

The second is to lie on your back with feet elevated, but legs straight, and flex alternate knees to chest.

Let Your Handicap Help Steel Your Soul

By Elizabeth Henney

Sometime ago a Lutheran pastor gave a sermon to his congregation which seems to be most apt now or any time when the wounded ones start coming home; or to anyone with handicaps to overcome.

It was recalled to mind most strongly after a recent visit through the amputation wards at Walter Reed Hospital, of which more later.

ELIZABETH HENNEY

The particular sermon was on the subject that "Handicaps If Defeated Are an Aid to the Soul." And the pastor whose words they were is the Rev. Dr. Oscar Blackwelder, pastor of the Lutheran Church of the Reformation here.

His was a new way of viewing personal handicaps, and perhaps his message will spread more hope and encouragement than any other yet given on the subject.

"A man who doesn't have a handicap to outlive or outgrow is perhaps missing life altogether," says Dr. Blackwelder. "His sense of values regarding others less fortunate than he are not quite so acute as that of the individual who has had to fight his way to the top.

"Some people let handicaps sap their lives. Others use the resources of eternity of which God assures us as He did St. Paul and his thorn in the flesh.

"A new sense of personal management is ours when we overcome handicaps, whether physical or mental. A new strength is born when individuals conquer social or organic inherited tendencies."

In a way those thoughts match those of the instructors of artists, actors and writers who say to them: "You will never learn to put real feeling into your art or endeavor until you have suffered a great deal. For then is when you will have developed depth enough to really appreciate life."

And, summed up, all of those ideas are just paraphrasings of the axiom that "steel is tempered by fire."

Perhaps out of the holocaust of this war, those returning wounded, by rising above their afflictions, shall help build a nation, which, will be of firmer steel and better metal than ever before.

Congressional Fancy May Turn to 'House on Hill'

By Martha Rhyne

If congressional fancy is turned to benevolence by the coming warmth of spring (as yet a rumor) the young pages who generously populate legislative halls may at last get that fraternal hall which has been their desire and the desire of their concerned elders for many a session. For of the 68 youngsters who were once termed "the world's highest priced water boys," nearly half of them are here on their own—away from home and family seeking what has been termed the most potent of opportunities for education on the spot—and a warm one at that!

Taking up the cause of the young fellows, whose ages range from 12 to 16 on the Senate side and from 14 to 18 on the House side, is Representative Alfred J. Elliott (D., Calif.) who has plugged away at plausible plans through the fall and winter and is now ready, with his committee, to lay the whole thing at the feet of our national solons, where the problem belongs. And this time it seems sure to come to a showdown, one way or the other.

Mr. Elliott's plan—that of buying a house through congressional appropriation—embraces setting up a home, properly supervised, which the young fellows can call "home" without wincing at the paradox. (Many live in basement rooms under little or no kindly surveillance, a condition which isn't exactly conducive to producing the stalwart young men whose jobs keep them in a veritable incubator of intellectuality.)

The business of being a page boy is more a matter of serious work than of "meeting such interesting people," a la movie legend. It's not easy for a boy so young to take the reins in his own hands and cope with such problems as room, board, laundry and recreational facilities. It is no wonder that he feels that Congress has an obligation to him, too, in a spree of national spending that has provided housing for nearly everyone in need of a friendly roof.

Work is interspersed with school and vice versa and as long as the House remains in session, the pages stay on duty. Duties include putting a copy of the Congressional Record under every seat in the dignified halls, carrying packages and papers to office buildings, answering calls on the board during sessions, and performing the many and varied tasks which only the title "page" can encompass.

Long an institution on the Hill, the pages, their laughs and heartaches, are a familiar story to old-line Washingtonians. Many recall a venture into journalism several years back which held rich promis of becoming a flawless mirror of the activities of our statesmen—with the United States Senate page boys holding the editorial responsibilities. It was so flawless that it mirrored the activities of Senators after working hours and that is what forced the editor to decide once and for all whether he wanted to be a journalist or a page—he decided to remain a page.

It is said that listening to legislative oratory or thereabouts is the chief duty of the lawmakers-in-the-bud. No one has ever doubted or complained that they didn't earn their money.

United Nations Club to Have Musical Program

A musical evening is planned for members of the United Nations Club tonight, when they will hear a program by Mme. Vladimir Rybar and Mrs. Thomas Burke. The concert will be held at the new clubhouse at 1701 19th st.

Mme. Rybar, wife of the Counselor at the Yugoslavian Embassy, will sing a group of songs including Polish, Italian and English selections. She will be accompanied by Dr. Rybar. Mrs. Burke, noted Chilean pianist, will play compositions by Liszt, Chopin and some modern Spaniards.

In the company attending will be several representatives from diplomatic and official circles. The Countess Zamoyska is chairman for the evening, her assistant being Maj. Phillip Cook.

Also scheduled this week for club members is a special sneak preview of a film about the action of the Eighth Air Force over Germany. It is an actual portrayal of combat and has never before been shown publicly.

Committee Meets To Discuss Plans

Twenty or 30 members of the Navy League gathered yesterday afternoon at the home of Princess Pignatelli on Foxhall rd., to discuss plans for the benefit showing of the film "The Story of Dr. Wassell" which will take place on April 1 in Constitution Hall. The event is being sponsored by the Navy Department, the Red Cross, and Navy League. Proceeds will go to the Red Cross.

In charge of the meeting yesterday was Mrs. Edward Treglown, chairman of the Navy League ticket committee.

Mrs. Woodward Sponsoring Local Navy Wives Club

Under the sponsorship of Mrs. Clark Howell Woodward, wife of Rear Admiral Woodward, a Washington chapter of the Navy Wives Club of America is being organized in the Capital.

The initial meeting will take place on Tuesday, March 28, at 1:30 in the YWCA Building at 17th and K sts. Wives of enlisted personnel in the Navy, Coast Guard and Marine Corps are eligible for membership in the club. Directing the activities of the club and aiding in its organization will be Mrs. Helen Bolshazy, national president of the Navy Wives Club of America. Membership in the club may be made by contacting Miss Betty Drake at National 3431.

Mrs. Woodward, who is hard at work on this new project, is an experienced hand at organizing Navy welfare groups. A few years ago she organized the Charlotte Woodward Chapter of the NWCA in Brooklyn when her husband was stationed there. The purpose of the clubs, according to Mrs. Woodward, is to promote social welfare and educational activities among young Navy wives, who find themselves stationed in strange cities with few friends or social contacts. Mothers are especially welcome, she points out, and are urged to bring their children.

LONGER WEAR FOR YOUR CLOTHES

Manhattan customers get longer wear from their clothes because—at Manhattan their things are placed in strong net bags while being washed. These net bags guard clothes against rubbing as palm oil suds and many changes of water swirl through them . . . And, because clothes are sorted by types and colors before being washed, Manhattan methods give whiter whites, brighter colors, too.

Artist Does Something New 'For the Boys'

Something for the boys!

High and low, most Washingtonians during the past few years have taken this phrase to heart. Almost everyone has engaged in some form of activity designed to make life pleasanter for the servicemen stationed far from home. And no exception to the rule of the day is Nicholas Pavloff, Russian-born artist, who this season has done portraits of dozens of the city's great and near-great.

In carrying out his interpretation of the phrase, he does charcoal sketches of service men and women, and presents his models with the finished products. His activities along these lines have been so extensive that now the famous name of Pavloff decorates portraits hanging on barracks walls throughout the Washington area.

One night recently, at a party sponsored by the Home Hospitality Committee, he completed three portraits—two of wounded servicemen just back from overseas duty and one of a pretty dark-eyed Canadian miss, a member of the Auxiliary Territorial Service.

His art work proved the major attraction of the evening, drawing the young uniformed guests away from the buffet tables, the dance floor and the orchestra. He was surrounded throughout by a host of kibitzers who did not hesitate to offer suggestions at such times as they deemed necessary.

"Don't you ever erase, Mr. Pavloff?" one youngster asked.

"Always, when doing these sketches," the artist explained with a smile, and added: "You see I am most interested in the face of my model. Soldiers, however, always want their uniforms, medals and insignia included. This I frequently forget and then have to erase the head to get the drawing back in proper scale."

Each sketch is finished in approximately 45 minutes. Then the model comes around to look it over, surrounded by his companions. Their criticisms are of the deadly direct variety, but Mr. Pavloff enters into the spirit of the thing and has a thoroughly good time.

"They are my most severe critics," he laughs, "and heaven help me if I forget that hard-earned service ribbon!"

Go West, Young Man—

The Washington office of the San Francisco, Calif. Chamber of Commerce—whose extreme civic pride is at times ill concealed—has been singled out for a signal honor.

Mrs. H. L. Francisco, whose husband has gone down to sea in the cause of the U. S. Navy, has just given birth to a son at her home in Bucklin, Mo. And she sends the happy news to the Capital office with the notation that she's named the young man, "San" as in San Francisco. Now when papa comes home and junior is able to stand on his own two feet, they'll all be headed West to visit young San's namesake—the city of Golden Gate fame and sunny weather, it says in the Chamber of Commerce manual.

Maybe there's nothing new under the sun—but it is a novelty, to put it mildly, to see a city handing out cigars in the fatherly manner.

Miss Marjorie Amber Brigham Engaged

Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Brigham of Sandy Spring, Md., announce the engagement of their daughter, Marjorie Amber Brigham, to Staff Sergt. Robert Whitley Miller, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Miller of Silver Spring, Md.

Sergeant Miller, who has been stationed in Greenland for nine months with the Eighth Weather Squadron of the U. S. Army Air Corps, returned recently and is attending Officers' Candidate School at Fort Monmouth, N. J.

The bride-elect is a member of the 1944 graduating class at the University of Maryland and will graduate from the Nurses' Training School the latter part of June. No date has been set for the wedding.

Lady Halifax, Envoy Leave

The British Ambassador and Lady Halifax have gone to South Carolina and yesterday were entertained at breakfast by the Governor of the State and Mrs. Olin D. Johnson at the Wade Hampton Hotel in Columbia. Following the breakfast, Lady Halifax accompanied the Ambassador to call on the mayor of Columbia and later yesterday afternoon they went to Charleston. Yesterday Lord Halifax was the guest of honor at a luncheon with the Columbia Rotary Club.

Their Charleston visit will include a visit to the Navy yard where they will inspect ships and have luncheon with the Commandant and Mrs. Jules James. They will also call at the air base, later to be guests of honor at a reception. The British Consul at Charleston and Mrs. Henderson will be hosts at the reception. The Ambassador and Lady Halifax will return to Washington Thursday.

Anything Less Than the Most You Can Spare

IS NOT ENOUGH

There are none of the comforts of home in a foxhole. The roof, if any, leaks badly. The floor is mud, just plain mud. There's scarcely room to move. Nobody delivers the morning paper. And the "neighbors" make terrific din, day and night. Brother, it's no picnic . . . but when the order comes to "dig in", you dig, for it may mean your life.

And the order has come from your conscience on the home front . . . to dig in; to your pockets, to your heart, to your very life's blood to help our fighting lads to bear this chapter in their lives. It's a long and heart-breaking chapter that many of the boys will never finish. Would you have it on your conscience that more of them could have, had you done your part? The American Red Cross asks you to think pretty seriously about that, and give them all you can spare—so that they may carry on.

The RED CROSS is at his side,
and the Red Cross is YOU

HOPE RIDINGS MILLER

Hale Was Pinched; Where Is Uncertain—But He Was Pinched

ALTHOUGH DIGNIFIED Representative Robert Hale of Maine—who, incidentally, is extremely annoyed at the publicity involved—has flatly denied that he was pinched, as reported, by a female guest at the British Embassy recently, he can scarcely deny that he was pinched . . . somewhere.

Shortly after the story broke a few days ago, he told reporters it couldn't be true because he had never been to a party in the British Embassy. Latest rustlings of the Capital grapevine have it, however, that he was present at a party last week in Georgetown, where the pretty wife of a high Government official approached him from the rear . . . and gave him a neat pinch, by way of getting his attention.

When he turned in astonishment and realized she had never seen him before, she said, "Oh, I beg your pardon. I thought you were Justice Frankfurter!"

ᔓ

MME. CHAUTEMPS is justly proud that her husband was four times Premier of France and once Vice President, and that she herself won wide acclaim throughout Europe as a concert artist under the name of Mlle. Juliette Durand-Texte. But she frankly admits that those accomplishments on the part of her husband and herself got them exactly nowhere in their early days in Washington.

Rather, it was her Paris record as a champion bridge player that first gained attention here. Her first invitation came from a local bridge league with which she has been associated ever since.

"I sometimes tell my husband that if I hadn't been a bridge champion in Paris we might never have met anybody in Washington," she said with a smile at a diplomatic dinner the other night. "Apparently his record as a statesman and mine as a virtuoso pianist were not known here at all. But my career as a bridge player—ah, that brought the friends to our door!"

ᔓ

SENATOR FERGUSON of Michigan now knows something about the way Rudolph Hess must have felt when the plane in which he flew to England from Berlin dropped in the middle of a Scotsman's field some time ago.

Here's why: The Senator recently attended a helicopter demonstration on Long Island. With admiring eyes he saw the machine flown straight upward, downward, sidewise and so on. Then, when the show was over and he was congratulating the pilot, he (the Senator) remarked that he would have to be off to New York for an early appointment.

"I'll fly you over," said the pilot. "Just hop in; we'll be there in a jiffy; and I can put you down almost anywhere you wish."

As they flew over Fifth ave., between Seventieth and Eightieth sts., the Senator spotted a pocket-sized area, inclosed by a fence.

"Could we land there?" he asked hopefully.

"Certainly. We will," was the reply.

Five minutes later they were down on a ground plot very little larger than the plane itself.

Before they had time to alight, a crowd had gathered around.

"My gosh—it's Hess!" somebody cried as the Senator stepped out.

While the pilot explained who the Senator was, where they had come from, and why—the former slipped away, got a taxi and went on about his business.

The incident was the first of its kind . . . in that particular area.

RECOMMENDED: If you haven't read that enchanting book, "Wake Robin," written by John Burroughs in 1871—don't let the sun go down before you do.

I heard Justice Frank Murphy mention it the other day as the tome he always rereads just as spring breaks. (And don't forget "spring" is with us now—on the calendar, at least.) He spoke particularly of the chapter, "Spring at the Capital," and said something about its being pure poetry and a nature-lover's delight. I found the "Wake Robin" yesterday, started reading the chapter in question; couldn't put the book down until I had finished the whole thing. It's all that Justice Murphy hinted . . . and more.

I hadn't known before, incidentally, that Justice Murphy is an authority on ornithology; that he can tell you more about birds in half an hour than the average man learns in a lifetime. I gathered from what he said that the current cold snap has retarded the migration northward and that we need not expect the bluebirds in Washington for a couple of weeks. Shortly after they arrive, the robins will be here in force; then the orioles . . . and then the humming birds, winging their way back home after a winter's vacation in South America.

But if you're interested, you can find out more on that subject from "Wake Robin," which, by the way, takes its name—not from a bird but from the common name of the white Trillium, which already is blossoming in Rock Creek Park, by way of announcing that "the birds" will soon be here.

Notre Dame De Namur Affair Friday

Plans have been completed for the annual benefit of the Notre Dame de Namur Alumnae which will be held Friday at 8:30 p. m. in the ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel. Proceeds from the affair will be applied to the Notre Dame Educational Fund.

"Have the Movies Gone Holy?" is the title of the lecture to be given by the Rev. Wilfred Parsons, S. J., former editor of the Catholic weekly America and now professor of sociology and politics at the Catholic University of America.

Critical Attitude

A well-known author and lecturer, Father Parsons has just returned from Hollywood, where he acted as technical adviser in the production of the film version of "The Keys of the Kingdom," A. J. Cronin's latest best-seller.

The Notre Dame de Namur Alumnae is sponsoring the lecture in the interest of promoting a sound critical attitude on the part of Catholics toward the motion pictures.

This benefit lecture is of wide interest because of the large membership of the alumnae in Washington which is active in welfare, philanthropic and war work.

Chairmen Appointed

Miss Kathryn A. Creveling is the president of the association. Other officers include Mrs. Joseph F. Fahey, vice president; Miss Lydia Hartnett, corresponding secretary; Miss Emma Byrnes, recording secretary and Miss Elizabeth Callahan, treasurer.

Mrs. Joseph A. Hurney, jr., the general chairman of the benefit, has appointed a large group of chairmen and assistants.

Mrs. John J. Fuller, chairman of the patroness committee, has obtained a long and distinguished list of patrons and patronesses. She is assisted by Miss Daisy Brick, Mrs. William Grogan, Miss Margaret Frawley and Miss Margaret Carr.

Miss Bernadette L. Dore, chairman of the arrangements committee, is assisted by Miss Marie B. Nohe, Mrs. C. Thomas du Fief and Miss Margaret McAllister.

Mrs. James F. Hartnett, president of the International Federation of Notre Dame de Namur Alumnae, a member of the local chapter, will head the reception committee.

4 Decline to Fight U. S. Charges of Polygamy

Salt Lake City, March 21 (AP).—Four defendants in Federal District Court declined today to contest the Government's accusation that they had supported one or two polygamous wives in addition to their legal spouses.

They said they would accept a ruling by United States District Court Judge T. Blake Kennedy as to their guilt or innocence. They are charged with Mann Act violations.

Attorneys said their only defense would be that the plural marriages were consummated through a religious belief, and that there are no Federal laws barring such marriages.

Agree to Proposal

Agreeing to the proposal were Follis Gardner Petty of Pocatello, Idaho; Heber Kimball Cleveland and David Bringham Darger, both of Salt Lake City and Vergel Y. Jessop of Short Creek, Ariz.

The Government accused Cleveland of having two polygamous wives in addition to his legal wife, and charged Petty, Darger and Jessop with having one plural wife each in addition to their legal mates.

The statement charged that at one time Cleveland had two of the women at a home in Grand Junction, Colo., and "would alternate sleeping with these two women. He would introduce them to people in grand junction as sisters-in-law, or other relatives."

Petty was married to Ina Campbell in Kentucky, December 31, 1913. Subsequently the couple moved to Pocatello and Petty took Mary Margaret Ford as his polygamous wife July 7, 1934, the statement said.

Government Charges

He established a home for his second wife at Providence, Utah, the statement said, alternating between the two homes.

Relating the alleged activities of Darger, the statement said he discussed plural marriage with Cleveland in 1942.

During the discussion, the statement said, "Cleveland promised the dependant that he should have the six-day-old female baby of Cleveland as his plural wife when said baby reached 14 years of age."

The statement quoted a letter it said Darger wrote to Cleveland some months later in which Darger, referring to the baby, wrote: "She is a very great joy to look forward to having some day."

All-Male Jury Awaits Lonergan Case Testimony Today

New York, March 21 (AP).—An all-male jury completed late today in the first degree murder trial of Wayne Lonergan, charged with slaying his wife, Patricia, 22, heiress to a 6-million-dollar fortune.

Two alternates also were selected, clearing the way for the opening addresses of Assistant District Attorney Jacob Grumet and Defense Counsel Edward V. Broderick tomorrow.

Completion of the jury in a quick-moving session was preceded by official disclosure that the 26-year-old defendant's purported confession was unsigned.

Broderick said to General Sessions Judge James Garret Wallace that, to determine whether he should call handwriting experts, he would like to know whether the statement bore a signature.

Wallace asked Grumet whether it was signed. Grumet said it was not, and added:

"It seems to me that defense counsel should obtain that information from the defendant."

"Well," said Wallace, "now he has it double. There won't be any need for a handwriting expert."

During examination of talesmen, the prosecution exeused one who said he did not believe wholeheartedly in capital punishment.

Lonergan sat bolt upright at the mention of "electric chair," but gave no other indication of emotion throughout the day.

The hero of Longfellow's "Hiawatha" was a sixteenth century Mohawk Indian chief, though he appears in the poem as an Algonquin.

Boston Booksellers Ban Lillian Smith Novel

Boston, March 21 (AP).—Boston booksellers have banned voluntarily all sales of Lillian Smith's controversial new novel, "Strange Fruit," on the ground that it contains indecent passages.

The novel deals with lynching and miscegenation, among other matters, and contains references to sex relations which Police Commissioner Thomas F. Sullivan described as "the boldest I have ever seen."

Birth Control Aid to Military, Physician Says

Parental failure to space children properly is largely responsible for the high percentage of youths rejected for military service, Dr. Walter M. Brunet, medical director of a Brideport industrial plant, declared yesterday at the annual meeting of the District Planned Parenthood Association at the YWCA.

Dr. Brunet pointed out that planned parenthood improves the health of mothers, lowers infant death rates, cuts down congenital illness, raises the standard of living and eliminates abortion.

It is even more important in wartime, he stressed, that mothers must work and families move and separate. "Conception control is a must item on our war health program and should be carried on intensively when hostilities cease," according to the physician.

"Opponents of the planned parenthood projects are either theologians or propagandists," Dr. Brunet argued. He added that although birth control is outlawed in Connecticut, his office had had no difficulties with the women referred to outside medical offices for such advice.

The association reported increasing interest in their program during the past year, when 2599 visits were made to the clinic at 715 E st. nw., and medical chiefs and employe counselors in Government agencies were acquainted with their work.

The following board of directors was elected:

Mrs. Prentiss Willson, president; Mrs. David R. Craig, vice president; Mrs. James Sharp, secretary; Mrs. Edgar M. McPeak, treasurer; Mrs. John L. Proctor, Joseph Sanders, Mrs. Lewis C. Ecker, Mrs. Fontaine Bradley, John Laskey, Dr. Agnes McNutt, the Rev. Francis McPeek and Dr. Walter I. Stokes.

Coroner Probes Death of Trucker

Winchester, Va., March 21 (AP)—A man identified by papers on his person as James Robert McKinnon, 55, of Akron, Ohio, met death here late yesterday when a trailer-truck he was driving edged off the highway in the northwestern section of Frederick County and dropped into a 6-foot ditch.

Dr. H. I. Pifer, Winchester coroner, said an examination of the man showed that he had suffered a few minor scratches, not serious enough to cause death. He declined to make a statement as to the cause of death until he had been able to make a more thorough examination.

Senate Passes Revised UNRRA Legislation

The Senate passed and sent to the House yesterday compromise legislation pledging United States participation in the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration.

Passage, on a roll call vote of 47 to 9, followed rejection, 36 to 22, of a motion to recommit the proposal to Senate and House conferees.

Senator Willis (R., Ind.) sought recommittal because of the refusal of House conferees to accept his amendment stipulating that none of the $1,350,000,000 participation authorized by the bill be spent on any religious, educational or political programs in countries where relief is given.

Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.) opposed Willis' motion, although he had voted for the amendment previously.

Worker Killed At Navy Yard

Richard Kade, Negro, 32, of 1409 Montello ave. ne., was injured fatally yesterday in an accident in the Navy Yard forge shop.

Kade, who was guiding a forging from the furnace, lost his balance and fell backward, striking his head on a steel plate, according to Navy authorities.

Kade is survived by his wife, Mrs. Leila Kade, of the same address.

Recapture "that Younger Look"

At last, comes the astonishing news every woman has hoped for! Science has now found the active, "vitalizing" substance that gives the "bloom" to pretty young skin! As this substance decreases, skins often begin to look dry and older. But now the ENDOCREME laboratories have found a counterpart of nature's secret... that replaces the substance so needed by your skin. It is called ACTIVOL*...and brought to you only in ENDOCREME. Results of its use are often remarkable. Skins look firmer, fresher... frequently take on a look of young "bloom." There's nothing else like it! Only 11½¢ a day...for this priceless ingredient. You won't be content till you've tried ENDOCREME!

Even Seconds Help

Long distance calls continue to crowd the circuits. We have adopted many arrangements to get more calls over the lines than they were ever designed to carry and to get them through faster.

When you must make a call, here's a way which may speed your service a little. Give the operator the details of your call in the following order:

FIRST—give her the name of the distant city and state.

THEN—give her the telephone number you want.

If you do not know the number, give the operator the name and address so she can get the number for you.

WAIT—until the operator asks for your telephone number.

Simple, isn't it? But it will help to speed your call.

'Voice of the Turtle' Charmed Large Sum; Notes of the Theater

(Reprinted from Tuesday's Early Editions.)

REGARDLESS of any public discontent that may have been engendered by a demand for seats out of all proportion to the capacity of the National Theater, the net returns from the single "command performance" of "The Voice of the Turtle" last January must have been a source of high glee to those locally in charge and the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, Inc.

VIVIEN LEIGH

Yesterday Judge Andrew R. Kelley of the subcommittee on entertainment for the President's birthday celebrations turned over to the office of Commissioner John Russell Young, on behalf of the committee and Manager Edmund Plohn of the National a check for $2958, representing the net profits from the one superlative performance by Margaret Sullavan, Elliot Nugent and Audrey Christie of one of the best comedies of modern times.

If that could have been kept up for eight performances, the gross probably would have given the National a new all-time record.

While we are on the echo of "The Voice of the Turtle," a random guess would be that it will be as big a hit in London as it has been on this side. The London company, it has now been determined with some definiteness, will be two-thirds Vivien Leigh and Laurence Olivier.

So great was the success of last week's presentation of "Nine Girls"—originally produced here under the title of "This Little Hand"—by the Cue and Curtain Club of George Washington University, that it will be repeated on Friday and Saturday nights of this week in the Wardman Park Theater. In its revised version, a prologue and another girl have been added, thus placing the title a shade on the side of understatement.

There have been a few readjustments of the preliminaries to the Navy League's preview of "The Story of Dr. Wassell," in Constitution Hall, come the end of the month, for the benefit of the Red Cross. Instead of arriving by train on March 31, Producer-Director Cecil B. DeMille will plane in on March 29, thus adding two days to his Washington visit. The remainder of the visiting stars—with a question mark continuing after Gary Cooper's name—will arrive by rail on March 31. Signe Hasso is so impatient to get here that she is reported already holding down her reservation in the Pullman. Mr. Cooper, yes, if International Pictures can keep abreast of their schedule on his current production.

"Green Fields" and "Mediterranean Miracle," described as "two unusual, full-length films, exciting as well as educational," will be shown on Sunday at 2:30 and 8 p. m. at the Jewish Community Center, 16th and Q sts. The first is a picturization, with complete English subtitles, of the classic comedy by Peretz Hirshbein, noted Yiddish playwright; the second, dedicated to the role of the Jewish pioneers of Palestine in the war effort and in the building of a nation. Presented under the auspices of the League for Labor Palestine, proceeds will be devoted to educational work for Zionism.

To make it as easy as possible for as many as possible to enjoy Walt Disney's "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," when it bows in Thursday at RKO-Keith's Theater, early opening hours have been announced. Keith's doors will swing back weekdays at 9 a. m., Saturday at 8 a. m., and Sunday at 12 noon. So now you know—and don't forget!

It may be noted that Mr. Swoonatra, in "Higher and Higher," is packing 'em in at the Earle precisely as was to have been expected. A better boy than you might think in a ditto bit of celluloid foolishness.

This will be one of those weekends when new features will be popping out on the downtown screens in almost the profusion of spring snowstorms in the Capital's environs.

Today, for example, the Little Theater will be inaugurating a run of the excellent "Scarlet Pimpernel," starring the late Leslie Howard. Tomorrow, Disney's "Snow White" will take possession of the RKO-Keith screen, and, at Loew's Palace and Capitol, the respective new attractions will be the incomparable "Song of Bernadette" and Kay Kyser and a likely crew in "Swing Fever." Friday, the fabulous Technicolored "Cover Girl" will be getting its first run at the Earle, and "None Shall Escape," at the Metropolitan.

About that "Song of Bernadette," you ought to know that prices will be 75 cents for adults and 40 cents for children, at the matinees; $1.10 and 55 cents for night performances. Service men and women in uniform will be assessed 50 cents at matinees and 75 cents at night.

Garson Will Age 66 Years in Film

Hollywood—Covering six periods in a 66-year span, "Mrs. Parkington" will be filmed chronologically by Director Tay Garnett. At the opening of the film story, Greer Garson will appear as 18-year-old Susie Graham. Final sequences will show Greer as 84-year-old Susie Parkington.

Sequences are laid in 1872, 1875, 1879, 1902 and 1938. The locales are Leaping Rock, Nev.; New York, Sussex, England, and Cannes, France.

Broadway Notes and Anecdotes

New York, March 21.—Lieut. Col. Vincent Sheean, who recently returned from Italy, is with the tactical branch of the Air Force. The tactical operations are combined ones—with the British and American fliers working in teams. They fly together, eat together, and are billeted together . . . When Sheean arrived, and found the American and British fliers about to sit down to lunch, the commanding officer told him that they looked upon this as an admirable step toward postwar collaboration . . . Celery was placed on the table at the beginning of the meal. It was Italian celery—much of it green and edible. The Americans ate all the pieces of white celery. "If you meant this as a test of international good will," Col. Sheean reminded the C. O., "perhaps you should know that Americans eat celery before the meal, and the British eat celery after the meal."

BONITA GRANVILLE

At the last diplomatic reception in Moscow a husky American Army officer found himself being observed by a group of Japanese officials nearby. They were too far away to hear what he could say. He didn't want them to miss knowing what he was thinking . . . He reached for a knife, and to his companion he gave a knifing illustration of an Oriental operation, with exaggerated gestures, so that the onlookers wouldn't miss it—gestures which began, first, by placing his left hand about 5 feet from the floor the size of the average Jap, and then with the knife in his right hand ripping, cutting, slicing.

When the circus arrived in Moscow, the feature of the show was a lady lion tamer. The highlight of her routine was a stunt in which she placed a piece of meat between her lips, and then the lion approached slowly, opened his jaws, and ate the meat from her mouth . . . At each performance the Moscow audience watched this stunt in awe. Not that a brave woman was such an unusual sight to them. But a piece of meat was.

Bonita Granville, who was reported being seen in the night clubs with George Raft last week, read those reports while she was in the Army hospital at McKinney, Tex., suffering from an attack of measles . . . Mark Hellinger, who is going to the South Pacific as a war correspondent, tried to enlist in the Army three times, but couldn't pass the physical. . . . Waverlly Root will be the new president of the Overseas Press Club . . . When Noel Coward arrived in Capetown a series of practical jokes were played upon him, involving fire engines and the entire Capetown Symphony Orchestra. Coward finally announced to the Daily Express' correspondent, "I'm no longer a playboy in exotic dressing gown, but a middle-aged man of 44 who's trying to do a workmanlike war job in the only way I know."

The British cruiser Penelope, which was called the "Pepperpot" because it was the most bombed at vessel in the war, had many miraculous escapes before it finally was sunk at the Anzio beachhead. Commander Grant, who once plugged the "Pepperpot's" hundreds of holes with wood and then brought the ship here for repairs, told us about the warship's experiences off Italy two years ago. Squadrons of Fascist planes attacked the ship, were repelled, and then fled back to their base at Taranto. The Italian newscasters immediately announced that the famed Penelope had been sunk. Commander Grant arranged a reply broadcast: "There were some young men from Taranto, Who set out on an exploit gallanto. They just saw the views, Then concocted the news, To make up for their kick-in-the-panto."

Mr. and Mrs. Leon Henderson dined at the home of Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean. Lieut. Gen. William S. Knudsen attended the dinner. Knudsen, who had been Henderson's boss at the old National Defense Advisory Committee, told Mrs. Henderson that he listens to her husband's broadcast series. "Leon has a Sinatra touch in his voice," said Knudsen . . . "Convince me, general, convince me," Mrs. Henderson challenged . . . "How?" asked Knudsen . . . "By swooning," said Mrs. Henderson.

Court Weighs Overcharge Suit by OPA

Justice James M. Proctor of District Court took under advisement yesterday a suit brought by OPA against the Rainbow Dyeing & Cleaning Co., Inc., which may set a precedent as to whether wholesale cleaning establishments can increase their prices by destroying customer classifications and appplying to all the highest price formerly charged any one customer.

Justice Proctor did not indicate when he would render a decision in the two-day trial that ended yesterday.

The OPA is seeking $5300 as treble damages for what the defendant is said to have overcharged customers. The plant, which does cleaning for several retail shops, is located at 736 6th st. se., and is headed by Bernat Weiss, president.

Previously the company had rates ranging from 40 through 60 cents for a single piece of work, but later substituted the top rate of 60 cents, according to OPA charges.

The OPA claims that the firm previously had maintained customer classifications and charged various rates ranging from 40 to 60 cents per piece. The charge depended upon such factors as the volume of work given by a shop, or the amount of competition the customer encountered in his neighborhood.

Wholesale Grocer Faces Suspension

Baltimore, March 21 (AP).—A Crisfield wholesale grocery will be suspended from dealing in rationed food for nine month beginning April 1, unless the firm apples for a stay from the State Office of Price Administration order.

The OPA said the suspension order followed three counts of violation of price regulations against Daugherty & Ward, Crisfield.

The firm was accused of selling rationed foods at above ceiling prices; obtaining 4,593,111 extra processed food points by erroneously stating the point value of foods, and failing to file a monthly report of the amount of processed foods transferred to retailers.

YOUR OWN BUSINESS AT OUR EXPENSE
Large and well-known Mutual Life Insurance Company is in position to appoint two men to its local sales force. These men will be paid a salary and given thorough field training with an established and successful supervisor. They will also be supplied with an established clientele and proven Direct Mail Sales Aids. This is not a collecting job. In 1943, our local sales force wrote over 10% of all ordinary life insurance sold in D. C. and averaged over $4,200 00 in earnings. Your earnings will be limited only by your ability and willingness to work. If you like selling and want a job with a lifetime future, this is it. TERRY AND THE PIRATES — Wing and Buck — By Milton Caniff

TERRY, DID YOU EVER WONDER HOW THE JAP AND GERMAN BIG SHOTS GET BACK AND FORTH BETWEEN BERLIN AND TOKIO?
YES, COLONEL CORKIN, BUT I NEVER THOUGHT MUCH MORE ABOUT IT THAN THAT.
WELL, YOU'RE STARTING TO, AS OF NOW ... THAT FOUR ENGINE, TWIN RUDDER, LOW-WING AIRCRAFT OUR TRANSPORT GUYS SIGHTED COULD HAVE BEEN A JUNKERS JU. 90 ...
BUT HOW COULD ONE OF THOSE GET INTO THIS THEATRE, SIR?
A JU.90 COULD FLY IN FROM A BASE IN ROUMANIA, TRANSFER ITS PASSENGERS AND MAIL TO A WAITING JAP SHUTTLE AIRPLANE, REFUEL AND RETURN...
BUT WE KNOW EVERY AIRFIELD IN THIS SECTION — WHERE WOULD THEY LAND — AND WHERE WOULD THEY REFUEL?
SEARCH ME, SPORT. THAT'S WHAT YOU'RE TO FIND OUT...

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY — By Dale Allen

LET'S BE SURE WE BOTH UNDERSTAND THE SCORE, PAULA! ... ARE YOU WORKING UNDER THE 1890 RULES, WHERE A KISS CONSTITUTES A PROPOSAL OF MARRIAGE?
RICK, YOU SILLY! OF COURSE NOT! I JUST LIKE YOU, THAT'S ALL!
I JUST WANT US TO SIT HERE AND LOOK INTO THE FIRE, TILL YOU FORGET ... WHATEVER IT IS YOU'RE TRYING SO HARD TO FORGET!
WELL .. I'VE GOT TO ADMIT THE PRESCRIPTION IS PAINLESS!
RICK! IS SOMETHING WRONG?
YES! ... AND I'M NOT LOSING ANY MORE TIME MAKING IT RIGHT!

MICKEY FINN — Dangerous Business — By Lank Leonard

WE'RE TAKING A CHANCE, MEN, SURFACING IN DAYLIGHT — WE KNOW THE JAPS ARE USING THIS ISLAND AS A REFUELING BASE —
— BUT THERE WERE ELEVEN AMERICANS ON THAT PLANE — TWO OF THEM WOMEN — AND SOME OF THEM MAY STILL BE ALIVE! STATIONS, FOR BATTLE SURFACE!
I'M TAKING ROGERSON, COLLINS AND FINN WITH ME, CAPTAIN! AND PHARMACIST'S MATE BENNETT!
VERY WELL! THE BASE IS ON THE OTHER END OF THE ISLAND — WE'LL JUST HOPE WE WON'T BE SPOTTED!
SUPPOSE WE ARE — AND THEY START LETTING GO WITH SHORE BATTERIES?
THEN GET BACK TO US FAST! WE'LL WAIT FOR YOU — AS LONG AS WE CAN!

MR. AND MRS. — He Ought to Know It By Now — By Arthur Folwell and Ellison Hoover

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

THE PRESIDENT has had what Louie Howe used to describe as "the old Dutch up" against General de Gaulle and the Army's plan for using him in the liberation of France. For two months the plan lay on the President's desk while he delayed in acting on it.

In January, this column reported that General Eisenhower had completely revamped any earlier ideas about de Gaulle, had found that he was overwhelmingly popular inside France and that, when the second front invasion came, the Allied Armies would get more support inside France if it was known in advance that they were cooperating 100 per cent with General de Gaulle.

Accordingly, a plan was worked out whereby immediate French elections and other political matters would be under de Gaulle's Committee of National Liberation when and if France was invaded.

This political set-up was especially pushed by the Army, which didn't want General Eisenhower to have to worry about political problems as he did in North Africa. The British also agreed, and even the State Department, never enthusiastic about de Gaulle, concurred—thanks largely to the go-getting salesmanship of Undersecretary Ed Stettinius. Furthermore, Admiral Leahy, former Ambassador to Vichy, who has always been unenthusiastic about de Gaulle, said that he would interpose no objection.

But when the plan got to the White House, it stuck. The President kept it for two months.

Grudge Since Casablanca

THE PRESIDENT has given no very clear explanation, but those who were at Casablanca think they know one of the answers. Ever since de Gaulle stubbornly refused to get together there with General Giraud, the President has had personal thumbs down on the Free French leader. Roosevelt had proposed to Churchill that de Gaulle be brought to Casablanca, figuring that, in the end, his persuasive charm could bring the two Frenchmen together.

But de Gaulle remained obdurate. Roosevelt even had a hard time getting him to pose for a photo with Giraud. It was one of the few times that the President has not been able to melt a visitor. In addition to which, de Gaulle, despite his high principles, is one of the most difficult Frenchmen anyone ever had to deal with. None of this has been forgotten at the White House.

So when the Army plan to cooperate with de Gaulle got stymied on the President's desk, Secretary of War Stimson and Acting Secretary of State Stettinius came up to the White House. Entering the executive office, Stettinius said:

"Mr. President, the Secretary of War is tremendously interested in this."

"What's the matter with the State Department?" chirped up Stimson. "Isn't the State Department interested in it, too?"

Stettinius agreed, but aroused no enthusiasm from the President, who suggested that the plan be redrafted.

"What you mean," surmised Secretary of War Stimson, "is to put in a whereas and a whereof clause saying, 'Notwithstanding the above, General de Gaulle is a so-and-so.'"

Rickenbacker on Russia

CAPT. EDDIE RICKENBACKER did some bare-knuckled sermonizing about the attitude of the average American toward Russia during a confidential talk on Capitol Hill the other night. Addressing a closed-door meeting of the "Seventy-Sixth Club" (third-term Republican Conressmen), the World War I ace declared that the minds of most Americans were cluttered up with "too much propaganda and too little real information" about our Soviet Allies.

Rickenbacker, who recently returned from a War Department sponsored tour of the battle fronts, also got in a few political licks against the New Deal, plus some kudos for his friend, Lieut. Gen. George Patton.

"The trouble with our thinking about Russia is that we are 20 years behind the times," Rickenbacker asserted. "Russia is entirely different now from the country we knew after the revolution. I had an excellent chance to study conditions there as a civilian observer for the War Department, and I was greatly impressed by the country and the people. In fact, the Russians could teach Americans a lot of things.

"Frequent accusation that the Soviet government is undermining family life is without foundation and obviously designed to create prejudice in the United States," Rickenbacker said.

Actually, the Soviet government is encouraging greater respect for family life, he said, and the employment of women in war factories is only a temporary expedient that has not interfered with their duties in the home.

"And everywhere I went, I noticed a growing tolerance of religion," he emphasized. "A few churches were closed, but a great many more were open. Anyone in Russia is free to attend religious services if he wants to. Also, the Russian people are working just as hard to establish free enterprise as we in America."

Views on Red Army

During the earlier Finnish campaign, every Russian general had a political commissar beside him, Rickenbacker said, with the result that military discipline suffered. However, since the withdrawal of the political commissars, there has been a marked improvement in the efficiency and morale of the army.

"Russian soldiers accept the promotion system as in any other army and they have the same respect for the authority of their officers," Rickenbacker remarked.

It required little coaxing by his GOP listeners to elicit Rickenbacker's views on the New Deal. Rickenbacker, a rock-ribbed conservative frequently criticized for his anti-labor utterances, also declared that American business itself was partly responsible for "all this regimentation" by Washington.

"American business men should come out of their foxholes and fight for their rights," he declared hotly, amid loud applause from his Republican audience.

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT

The reason why we guarantee you the best permanent wave you ever received in your lifetime is because we know what we are talking about. No matter what kind of hair you have, fine, baby fine, medium, coarse, bleached, overbleached or dyed hair, the harder it is the better we like it. Even if you have hair that becomes limp, lifeless and never looks right and has never taken a good permanent, we will guarantee a good permanent that will bring luster and life to your hair and you will be able to comb and brush it daily.

MONSIEUR ALBERT DE PARIS
international hair stylist, will create for you a new hair style.
